THIRTEEN SWING.

One Man Shot and the Citizens Fool the Officers.

As Fast as the Police Arrest a Murderer the Citizens Hang Him.

An Old Officer's Story About Mob Law in Los Angeles.

The Horrible Sight That Met the Gaze of a Squad of Policemen Who Thought They Had Made a Big Haul—Unwritten History.

Yesterday was a dull day at the police station. The hot sun beat down on the old earthquake shop, and between official snores the oldest man on the force allowed himself to be drawn out by a TIMES reporter, who had tramped all over the city without discovering so much as a dog-fight, and his note-book was as empty of items as a Democratic paper is of truth. The old club-wielder became talkative after a good deal of coaxing on the part of the scribe, and gave his views of the many dark and mysterious crimes that have been committed in Los Angeles of late, in the following manner:

"I've been in the criminal business 'most ever since this big an' prosperous city wor a small Mexican town, an' I tell ye what, fellers, the criminal element is havin' more of a picnic now nor they ever did before. It's only been er few weeks since the most awful wife-murder what ever took place in the State occurred. Yer all remember how that ignorant Mexican emptied the contents of a great big pistol into his wife. Well, he is alive yet. An' then only a few days after that the fiend Williams shot down his wife in cold blood, and he too is alive. Ye all know about the frightful Gormely case, and now we have ther Harlan murder to contend with. Take the past six months and ye can count up several of the darkest crimes what were ever committed in any country. The criminal element is gettin' mighty strong in this city, an' I don't see how we are going to thin 'em out. This reminds me of olden times in Los Angeles. Do any of yer fellows remember what a cleaning out we had about thirteen years ago? No, I guess ye don't. Well, I'll tell ye. A lot of hard citizens came down from 'Frisco by stage an' on foot, an' when they reached Los Angeles they wor a mighty hard-lookin' lot, I can tell ye. The whole gang took up their quarters on Nigger alley, among the Chinamen, an' in a very short time we officers saw that there was ter be big trouble. The northern citris belt crowd soon got every Chinaman in Chinatown by the ears, an' after they had robbed them right an' left they lit out. When they left there was a great confusion in Chinatown, and as a matter of course, the highbinders went ter fightin' amongst themselves. They kicked up a row over a gal what belonged to one of the bands of highbinders an' early one afternoon we heard a number of shots in the vicinity of Nigger alley, an' when we reached the place there were several hundred heathens ranged on each side of the street an' I tell ye they wor blazin' at each other as fast as they could load their guns. We reshed in an' begun to arrest them as fast as possible. There were not enough officers to take them to the County Jail, so we turned them over to the citizens, who came to our assistance.

"The fight lasted several hours, and when we first put in an appearance one of our men was shot down. He was not exactly an officer, but he was willing to give us a hand whenever we needed assistance and we needed him like blazes at that moment. We all rushed into the hottest of the fight, and during the first charge we lost the young man who so cheerfully came to our assistance. He was shot through an' fell into the arms of Maj. Mitchell, who was then a Star reporter. A number of citizens saw this an' they become thoroughly enraged an' made up their minds to be revenged on the highbinders. But they kept this to themselves, an' we never knew until after the fight was over how dreadful their revenge for their young friend's murder had been. As I said before, there were not enough officers present to conduct the prisoners to the County Jail when we captured them, so we turned the bloodthirsty rascals over to the citizens an' instructed them to take them to jail. Well, after the fight we were pretty well played out, so we walked down Los Angeles street a ways before turning up to Main so that we would escape the crowd who blocked all of the main streets. We had walked but a short distance, when we came to an old freight wagon standing near the sidewalk. We noticed something queer about the wagon, an' on goin' nearer we found a Chinaman hanging from the hind end. A few steps further we found another, an' ye may shoot me if we didn't find every Chinaman we had arrested, hanging from lamp posts and various places. As fast as we arrested a man an' turned him over to the citizens they marched him off until they reached some convenient place, where they hung him up without any more ceremony. They hung thirteen of them, an' I tell ye this was a mighty quiet town for a long time after that. Did we catch the men who hung the Chinamen? Not much. We were not lookin' for them. No, of course we did not know that they were goin' to hang the unruly heathens, or we would not have turned them over, but after it had been done there was nothin' more for us to do, an' the county was saved a great expense. A big row was kicked up of course, an' the head Chinaman in 'Frisco swore they would get even, but Los Angeles was a long ways off in those days, an' comin' down here by stage was not a nice trip, so the thing finally died out. No, we didn't have a vigilance committee, but when the citizens made up their minds to do a thing it didn't take them long to get together. I guess a Judge Lynch hangin' bee was never conducted in a more quiet an' orderly manner. No one outside of the thirteen Chinamen and the few citizens who started to take them to the County Jail knew what was goin' on until after the hangin' was over. We officers would turn one or two Chinamen over to them at a time, and they quietly walked off and sent John on his long journey without giving him a chance to say his prayers. O, it was a beautiful hangin' bee, an' ye would laugh yerself to death to hear some of the old fellows who are yet in Los Angeles tell about what a big day they had."

"Time," yelled the captain of the watch, and the old officer had to put on his uniform and go out to guard the city.

PAUL'S LICENSE.

The Day Was Fixed but he Fell in with Black Sheep.

Paul Quinlan is a ranch hand employed on a farm situated about two miles east of Savannah. For five months past he faithfully remained upon the farm, visiting Savannah but twice. One of these occasions was for the purpose of attending a country dance. During the evening of the dance he formed the acquaintance of a certain young lady. The introduction ripened into quite an acquaintance. They met afterward more than once. The lady's name was Lulu. Lulu lived in Shasta. She was visiting the family of her uncle. Paul thought well of Lulu. She thought well of Paul. The acquaintance ripened into a courtship. The courtship was an agreeable one. A few weeks after the introduction Paul informed Lulu that he loved her. Her actions proved that she reciprocated that love. A proposal was the result. An acceptance followed. Finally, a date was decided upon. That date was for one day several weeks ago. Paul made mention of his savings. With these savings, he believed, they could marry in style. Besides, he had leased a farm on shares. After marrying they were to go to housekeeping. Paul came to this city for a marriage license. The license was issued to him. Overjoyed with happiness, he indulged in a few drinks. While at the bar he struck up an acquaintance with a stranger. Paul treated. The stranger treated. The stranger piloted him around town. They took in the sights. Paul felt liberal. He footed all expenses. After taking in the town the stranger steered him to a faro-bank. The stranger played Paul's money. As a matter of course he lost. Paul was discouraged and took to hard drink. He got gloriously drunk and whooped it up all night. He was drunker than ever the next day, but he had sense enough to know that it was his wedding day, and he managed to make his way to the depot and managed to board the train. The ceremony did not take place that day. Paul enjoyed this little visit several weeks ago, and he learned a lesson which will follow him to his grave. The next time he starts out to buy a marriage license he will not "monkey" with Los Angeles sports.

HE SKIPPED.

A Midnight Duel, and How the Officers Were Left.

Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning the Chief of Police and several of his men were wandering through Sonoratown, looking for whom they might devour, and as the blue coats turned into Upper Main street they heard a deep-seated voice sing out:

"If ye wants ter fight, jist step inter this 'ere vacant lot, an' I'll 'commodate ye ter ther queen's taste."

Several hard-looking citizens rushed from a low saloon and rapidly walked to a vacant lot near by.

"Now," said the voice that first attracted the officers, "ye fellows have got ter stand back an' give us fighters fair play. I'll shoot ther first chap what mixes up in this 'ere little duel," and he whipped out an ugly-looking pistol.

The Chief thought things had gone far enough, and rushed in with raised club. He knocked the pistol down and was about to place the big fighter under arrest, when that individual took to his heels and was off like a flash of lightning. The officers lost no time in giving chase, and Auble soon had the fellow in custody. He brought him back to the lot, and, after taking the pistol away from him, he handcuffed his prisoner and stood him up against the fence, when he sailed in to capture some of the other fighters. This proved to be a mistake, for as soon as the officer's back was turned the handcuffed man started off again. Auble was about to go in pursuit, when the Chief told him to stand by the gang while he recaptured the scared man. Before Auble knew what was going on an ugly-looking "mug" slipped around behind him and knocked him down. The officer was on his feet in a second, and had his newly-found enemy on the flat of his back. He then started for the police station, where he booked the man as John J. Evans, for an assault. The Chief and several officers ran the handcuffed man through all of the out-of-the-way places, and finally had to give up the chase. He is known, however, and will probably be captured before he gets out of the city.

FARM AND RANGE.

LUCERNE OR ALFALFA.

The Boss Feed Considered from an Eastern Standpoint.

In speaking of this plant and its value as a grass, the Rural New Yorker says:

"This is botanically Medicago sativa, a perennial clover, growing according to the soil, from a foot to three feet high. The pea-like flowers are, borne in short racemes of a blue or blue-purple color. The French name is lucerne; alfalfa is the Spanish name. Ten years ago a plot of one-tenth of an acre was sown with this clover. It made a fine growth the first season, but was accidentally plowed up in the fall. At the New York Ex. Station lucerne produces an abundance of foliage, and it is hardy under a temperature of 15° below zero even in a cold soil. It begins to grow vigorously as early as mid-April, and in early July the first cutting is made. One plot yielded at the rate of ten tons per acre of green fodder, another seven. The plants of these plots have made a fine growth for four years. All animals relish them. One tap root was traced nearly four feet below the surface. In sandy soils they have been traced to a depth of thirteen feet. The land should be prepared as for clover and twenty pounds of seed to the acre sown.

"Prof. Shelton says that at the Kansas State Agricultural College lucerne makes the earliest growth, with meadow oat grass and Kentucky blue grass second and third and red clover and orchard grass fourth and fifth in the order of development. A large proportion of those who attempt to grow alfalfa will fail in the first attempt. Let it be known that it must have old, rich and well-drained land to begin with, and the freer this is from weeds the better. So says Prof. Shelton, and many others who raise alfalfa corroborate the statement. He further says that for hay, if cut a little too late in the season, the leaves fall off in handling, leaving the hard, woody stalks, which are worthless. It must be cut early and given plenty of field room; but if, when in the field, a rain happens to fall, the alfalfa is reduced to the condition of manure in a short time. For early and late pasture alfalfa, he thinks, has no rival among the so-called grasses.

"Prof. Beal, in his incomparable 'Grasses of North America,' says that alfalfa was known and prized by the Greek and Romans 2500 years ago, and it was alluded to by Columella as a most valuable plant for fodder. Lucerne, he says, is a 'child of the sun;' it likes a rich loam or sand with a deep, porous subsoil; it utterly refuses to thrive on a compact clay subsoil, or on a hard bottom of any kind. While young it is a weak plant and a poor fighter. It requires two years anyway to become well rooted. It should be sown, Prof. Beal says, after settled weather in the spring, with another crop. He advises that we sow in drills about eight inches apart, and hoe and cultivate once at least, to keep the weeds in check. The plant is a perennial that on suitable soil can be relied on to produce good crops for many years in succession. It stands dry weather admirably, and is very nutritious. It is a favorite for irrigated meadows and soiling, and is frequently cut from three to eight times in the year, yielding enormous crops of valuable fodder for all kinds of stock. At the Agricultural College, Lansing, Mich., lucerne, when hoed and properly started the first year, has not killed out during severe winters, while it beats everything to endure prolonged droughts. It is not suitable to mix with clover, as the clover overtops it. Prof. Beal knows of no attempt, however, in Michigan to establish, mow and feed crops of lucerne.

FAST FRUIT FREIGHTS

As Viewed from a Florida Standpoint.

[Florida Times.]

The experiments recently made on a large scale of shipping fruit of various kinds from California to the Eastern markets by fast freight in ventilated cars attached to passenger trains cannot be said to be satisfactory in every respect. The fruit, as a general thing, arrived in fair condition and with a very small percentage of loss, but the cost of transportation was such that the prices had to be doubled to the consumers, and of course this very seriously affected the demand. This manner of getting fruit from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast may, therefore, be looked upon as impracticable except during the season when the highest prices are obtainable, owing to the limited supply in the markets.

It is stated that most excellent results have been attained by shipping fruits across the continent in refrigerator cars. The freight bills are said to be about one-half the charges on the fast freights above-mentioned, and the freight has almost invariably arrived in as good condition as when it left California. It can then be put in cold storage if the market is unfavorable and kept for several weeks, if necessary, without deterioration.

In coming across the continent fruit shipped in ventilated cars is submitted to very considerable changes in temperature in transit over the torrid plains and through the mountain passes. Ordinary shipments, therefore, of the more perishable products have proved too hazardous to leave much profit for the producer.

The experiments being made in shipping California fruit will be watched with great interest by the growers of Florida. Within a comparitively short time our more perishable fruits will probably equal our present orange crop in importance. The difficulties in the way of transporting them to market are not great compared with those to be encountered by California growers, but they are great enough to command earnest study and elaborate experiment. The subject is one of growing importance, not only to our fruit growers, but to our vegetable growers as well.

There seems to be no reason why shipments of Florida fruits and vegetables in ventilated cars should not be successful, even if passenger trains are not utilized. This, we believe could be profitably done, as such shipments ought to go to the principal markets within from four to six days by freight trains. The long delays and lay-overs, which have been the occasion of so much loss, and consequent discouragement, can be avoided, as has been shown the past summer, in the case of watermelons shipped from Florida and Georgia over competing lines.

The refrigerator-car question may remain open for some time to come, but, if fruit can be profitably shipped in these cars from California to New York, why not from Florida to that city, less than one-third the distance?

LIVE STOCK.

Best Feed for Quick Drivers.

In answering an inquiry as to the best feed for quick driving horses, Prof. Stewart says in the Country Gentleman:

"Dr. P. has a sound opinion of the effect of feeding so much corn to Southern horses. As we have said before in these answers—corn gives a deceitful external appearance to horses, a well-rounded form but flabby muscle, soft bones, unsound feet. It will also be noted that these horses are small, which is, no doubt, owing to the want of muscle-making and bone-building nutriment. But we must mention one point more favorable to corn feeding in the South than in the Middle States—in the South there is more or less grass through the year. This grass assists somewhat in furnishing muscle-forming matter to balance the corn in raising colts, and makes them better than they would be if raised as much on corn in the Middle States.

"The important point to be considered in feeding a physician's horses is that they must be ready at any hour, and to this end they must have their food in small bulk, that all their muscles can have fair play without obstruction from a plethoric stomach. The change from ordinary feeding will consist in reducing the hay to be fed to eight pounds or to six pounds per day, or using only what is necessary to mix with the concentrated food to give it a healthy porous condition in the stomach, permitting the gastric juice to circulate throughout the mass and to perform its work of digestion rapidly and well. The old erroneous idea that a horse must fill himself with hay in order to be healthy has been the fruitful cause of the poor performance of horses kept for driving and light, quick work. The excess of hay impeded the muscular movements of the horses. The livery men reduced the hay and increased the grain, but fed them separately. When the point was made and reduced to practice, of mixing the hay and grain together, then the hay performed its true office of separating and giving bulk to the concentrated food. And when strictly confined to this office, six pounds of hay will keep a horse as healthy—and more effective for quick work—as any larger quantity. Let us examine this point. Six pounds of hay, cut one inch long, will measure, say three pecks in bulk. Now, suppose we compound the following grain food: 300 pounds of oats, 70 pounds of common field peas, and 30 pounds of flaxseed—let these be evenly mixed and ground together. This mixture has a nutritive ratio of 1 to 5, a good proportion for quick work. This is composed of 75 per cent. oats, 17.5 per cent. peas, 7.5 per cent. flaxseed. The pea is slightly constipating, but the flaxseed will wholly correct this, be very soothing to the digestive organs and give a glossy coat. We will give each horse 18 pounds per day, in three feeds—6 pounds at a feed—mixed with one peck of cut hay, moistened just enough to cause this ground-feed to stick to it. This will keep the horses in fine condition, healthy and ready for work. It is probable that the proportions might be changed thus: 300 pounds oats, 75 pounds peas and 25 pounds flaxseed. This ration will also be reasonable in cost."

ANIMAL AILMENTS.

And Some of the Best Ways to Combat Them

[Veterinary Dept. Kansas City L. S. Record.]

Quarter Crack.—A mare has a quarter crack on right fore foot. Have tried various hoof ointments, but while the crack seems to have closed at the top, the hoof does not seem to grow down as it should. It has been in this condition some months, but does not interfere with her driving. J. C. L., Jr., New York City. [Soak the feet in cold water twe hours a day for a week; then apply Moore Bros.' golden blister. In six days begin the soaking again and continue it for a week, after which three times a week will suffice. The horse should wear bar shoes and blister be repeated in a month. By these means the feet will grow out rapidly, and the new horn will not crack so easily, as it will be of much better quality].

Cough in Mare.—My mare, 4 years old last spring, has been troubled with a cough for the last three or four months. It seems hard and dry, very little running at nose; mare has good appetite and spirits and is improving in flesh. She coughs several times when first starting off to drive, and then, perhaps, no more until she is back in the stable. A. H. J., Sassafras, Md. [Steep half a pound whole flaxseed in gallon of boiling water in a pail over night, and each day use it up among the three meals. Give a tablespoonful of the following powders three times a day: Powdered muriate of ammonia, 4 oz.; powdered nitrate of potass., 4 oz.; powdered barbadoes aloes, 4 oz.; powdered licorice root, 8 oz. Mix. The powder must be put well back in the mouth to avoid waste.]

After-Birth Weakness.—A cow that brought twin calves about two weeks ago was three or four days in passing the after-birth, and still passes a thin, mattery discharge; otherwise doing well and has good appetite. The calves are doing well.—T. A. Q., Mitchell, Ind. [Inject syringeful of the following lotion twice per day into vigina: Bichloride of mercury, 1 dr.: tincture of aloes and myrrh, 4 oz.; tincture of opium, 2 oz.; sufficient quantity of water to make 1 qt. Feed the cow well.]

Swellings on Mare and Cow.—A mare has a swelling on one side of neck above withers; think it a fistula. Same mare had fistula on other side of neck or shoulder several years ago. It has not broken nor is it very large as yet (1). A cow has a swelling on outside of hind leg, between hip and hock joint; I cut it open and it discharged white, offensive pus. Cow is not lame (2). S. K. W., Smyrna, N. Y. [1. Have a veterinary surgeon treat it. 2. Syringe the wound twice a day with some of the following solution: Compound tincture of aloes, 4 oz.; chloride of zinc, ½ oz.; water, 1 qt. Mix.]

Six Million Eggs a Day.

The population of New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Hoboken, Staten Island, Newark and Paterson consume every day during Lent 3,000,000 eggs. It is safe to say that with what the bakers use the consumption of eggs within the area named is nearly 6,000,000 a day. When you figure up total in money paid out for eggs in the cities named, you see that there is expended in this one item of diet during Lent $120,000 per day, or for forty days $4,800,000. At present writing eggs are making an average daily advance of two cents per dozen in New York. During a time when such enormous quantities of eggs are being consumed this advance in price is no small item. The hens must be getting rich.

How Much a Man Eats.

[Richard A. Proctor in the Cosmopolitan.]

It has been calculated that on the average each man who attains the age of three score and ten consumes during the course of his life twenty wagon-loads of food, solid and liquid. At four tons to the wagon this would correspond to an average of about 100 ounces of food per day, or say some 120 ounces per day during adult life, and about eighty ounces during infancy and youth. Most modern doctors agree in regarding 120 ounces of food per day, corresponding to five or six half-pints of liquid food, and seven or eight pounds of solid food, as in excess of the real daily requirements of a healthy man or woman.

Yet probably most of us take more than this, in one way or another, during the day. Dr. Lankester, from an extensive analysis of the dietary of soldiers, sailors, prisoners and the better paid classes of artisans and professional men in London, found the average daily quantity of solid and liquid food to be 143 ounces. Doubtless many take much less, but unquestionably many take much more than this. When some one mentioned before Sydney Smith the twenty wagon-loads of food calculated for each man's allowance, he turned to Lord Durham, who, like himself, was corpulent (and not without sufficient reason), with the quaint remark: "I think our wagons, Durham, must be four-horsed ones." There are members of the London corporation, to seek no further, whose wagons must be six-horsed ones, and well loaded at that.

Eloped With His Stepmother.

[Barbourville (Ky.) News.]

John Miles, a widower, and Jim, his son, married sisters—Miss Wests—in this country, some time in the past few years, and were apparently happy with this intimate marital relationship, and their neighbors so regarded it until last week. During the past few days the son developed matters after a new order of affairs. Taking his wife back to her father's, he proceeded to his own father's house, and taking his father's wife, who was his stepmother and sister-in-law at the same time, came to town, took passage on the stage, and ere this, as man and wife, they are solving the problem of life in St. Louis. This strange denouement of an unusual matrimonial mixture was not unexpected by the parties most intimately concerned, if our information be correct, and father and son and wife, stepmother and sister-in-law seemed to have resolved on this step as a remedy for the mistake made at the altar. To say the least of it, this is "mixin' things."

For a Sanitarium

No spot in the country offers so many natural advantages as that sightly bench of land in the Duarte commonly known as the

"GEARY RANCH."

There is here found a rare combination of those sanative conditions indispensable to the successful treatment of throat and lung affections. The location is absolutely above the extreme fog limits. The chill of night and early morning hours is tempered by radiated warmth from the mountains that tower behind in close proximity. The heat of day is moderated by the natural conditions insured by an elevated and exposed situation. The magnificent mountains in the rear afford an effectual barrier against north winds, and from their deep ravines an abundant supply of pure spring water is obtained. A background of rugged mountains, a broad expanse of fertile valley below, with a strip of ocean shimmering beyond, combine to form scenery at once grand and beautiful in its diversified loveliness. The site is within a half hour's drive from the railroad station and over an excellent road of easy grade, by groves and vineyards and through a pretty live oak canyon in which not a trace of sand-wash is visible.

This valuable property, comprising in all 140 acres, will be sold as a whole, or a site for a sanitarium or mountain hotel. Can be secured on very advantageous terms, providing the parties will erect thereon buildings of a certain value.

IVANHOE

The Best Investment Offered Anywhere Near Los Angeles!

IVANHOE offers more inducements to purchasers of residence lots than any other suburb of Los Angeles. Among the many reasons why IVANHOE property is a first-class investment, we may mention the following:

First—It is only four miles from the Courthouse in Los Angeles to the center of IVANHOE.

Second—It is connected with Los Angeles by the best steam dummy railway in California.

Third—The fare from the city is FIVE CENTS.

Fourth—Trains will run OFTEN enough and FAST enough to accommodat business men.

Fifth—A complete water system furnishes water to every lot.

Sixth—The land is high and the atmosphere pure and dry.

Seventh—The soil is first-class.

Eighth—The lots are offered at prices far below other property near the city.

Ninth—The easy terms of payment, which are as follows: ONE-FIFTH CASH, and the BALANCE in EIGHT EQUAL MONTHLY PAYMENTS, WITHOUT INTEREST.

If you want any information, or wish to see IVANHOE, call on us and we will cheerfully furnish all information.

An American Girl Invited a Duelist to Breakfast.

[Paris Letter.]

A pretty Yankee girl is a daily attendant at one of the ateliers off the grand boulevards. Her lodgings are some distance up the Champs Elysees, and recently she became conscious that a certain young man, always at the same spot, overtook her on her way home to lunch and dogged her footsteps until she reached the door of her apartments. She knew enough of Paris customs not to blame the young man individually very much, but when one day he attempted to address her, she made up her mind that stringent measures must be used. Her aunt, a big-boned duenna of the strong New England type, was informed of the condition of affairs, and was made acquainted with her niece's proposed tactics.

The day after their council of war the young woman was overtaken as usual by her admirer. He again whispered soft words in her ear, and as she seemed to smile somewhat favorably on him, he kindly and hospitably invited her to breakfast. She expressed diffidence at accepting hospitality from an utter stranger, and objected that breakfast was awaitsng her at her own apartment. She, however, presumed that enough would be served for two, and if monsieur would excuse what defects there might be, she would be very glad of his company during her solitary meal. The young man jumped with eagerness at her proposition, and walked gaily by her side. Whatever apprehension the young girl may have had as to the risk of failure was not apparent in her manner, and she succeeded in confining the talk to pleasant generalities until her apartment was reached. There the young man received his first check when the door was thrown open and disclosed the sizable proportions of the stern duenna. He had, however, gone too far to turn back, and he allowed himself to be ushered inside, and the door to be closed on him.

"Aunt," explained the young woman to her duenna, "this poor fellow is hungry, and I told him I thought we could find him something to eat."

"Oh, certainly," answered the kind-hearted aunt; "I hope we need never refuse the demands of the needy. Marie," she called out to the trim maid, who immediately appeared, "take this man to the kitchen and tell the cook to give him some bread and meat."

The unhappy Frenchman, in spite of his protests and expostulations, was shown through the door into the kitchen, whence he was able to escape by the servants' stairway. The young lady has since seen or heard nothing from her harmless but annoying persecutor.

A Virginia Lochinvar.

[Parkersburg (W.Va.) Dispatch to Pittsburgh Dispatch.]

One of the most sensational elopements that has been known here for some time happened in Kanawha county the other morning. The young lady is Miss Lucy Haynes, daughter of a wealthy farmer. She is not quite 15 years old. Her partner in the scheme is George Young, aged about 19 years, who is also well connected. These children have been going together for two or three years, but always had to effect their meeting in a clandestine manner. Being earnest in their affections, and finding their parents unrelenting, they decided to elope. Before it was scarcely daylight yesterday morning Young rode quietly up to the Haynes residence and halted directly under the chamber-window of his lady-love. In a moment or two she was on the horse he had brought for her, having come down a rope from a second story, where she slept. Young found they had but forty minutes to catch the train, and the station nearly twelve miles away. To catch the train would be their last chance that day, and perhaps for some time. So after getting away from the house they let their animals out, and at a break-neck speed galloped across the country. Up hill and down they went in their wild flight. Farmers just getting up saw the spectacle in amazement, and wondered what it was. They reached the station just as the train was pulling in, and, leaving their jaded horses covered with foam, boarded the train, went to Gallipolis, O., and were married. Last night they returned, but sought refuge at a neighbor's.

Miss Alcott's Advice.

Miss Louisa Alcott gives the following advice to girls. It is a whole volume. She says: "Girls, don't be in haste to wed. Build up healthy bodies by good food, plenty of exercise and sleep. Learn all the useful household arts before you attempt to make a home. Cultivate your minds with the best books, that you may be able to teach your children much that school training alone will never give you. Choose your amusements wisely, for youth must have pleasure, but need not waste itself in harmless frivolity. Above all, select your friends with care.

"Avoid girls who live only for fashion, flirtation and enjoyment, and use the privilege all women may claim to decline the acquaintance of young men whose lives will not bear inspection by the innocent eyes of women. Let no delusion of wealth, rank, comeliness or love tempt you to trust your happiness to such an one. Watch and wait till the true lover comes, even if it be all your life, for single blessedness is far better than double misery and wrong. Spinsters are a very useful, happy, independent race, never more so than when all professions are open to them, and honor, fame and fortune are bravely won by many gifted members of the sisterhood. Set your standard high and live up to it, sure that the reward will come here or hereafter, and in the form best suited to your real needs."

Always Behind the Times.

[Chambers' Journal.]

Although the Philippine Islands lie near to the Asiatic Coast, it was by Spaniards, who sailed eastward from America, that they were settled. Did they revise their calendar when they crossed the magic line; and strike out a day to keep themselves abreast of the times? No such thing; the Spanish dons of that day were a proud and fiery folk, and if their calendar did not agree with the times, then so much the worse for the times. Anyhow, the fact remains that, when they arrived at the Manila or Philippine Islands, they still reckoned by the calendar which had been taken from Spain to America, and from America by them on their voyage. They were, of course, a day in arrear, but, as there were not then any important settlements of civilized nations thereabouts, with whom the date could be compared, the error was not noticed; the reckoning took firm hold, and, in consequence, the inhabitants of Manila keep plodding along one day behind all their immediate neighbors.

A Remarkable Family.

[Todd County Progress.]

F. M. Minturn, a gentleman in the employ of the Elkton City Mills, is connected with a piece of family history that, to say the least, is a little remarkable. He is the father of five children, who on their mother's side have a grandmother, great-grandmother and great-great-grandmother, all living in this State. The mother of the children is 39 years old, grandmother 57, great-grandmother 77, and great-great-grandmother near 100 years, still hale and hearty. This family belongs to a race of Kentuckians who were never known to die.

A Logical Conclusion.

Uncle Jeff: Look a-heah, you Hen'y Clay White. How many times I'e tole yo' smokin' 'll shawten yo' life mo'n half?"

Young H. C.: Well, Une' Jeff, yo' been smokin' mos' all yo' life, and yo' is a putty old man.

U. J.: Dat's all right, you fool nigga! I'm eighty-fo', and if I hadn't smoked when I was a boy I might 'a been mo'n a hundred years ole now.

Love's Mirror.

Look not within the glass to see,
Thine own sweet face reflected there,
Lest, like Narcissus, thou shouldst be
Enamored of thine own face fair.

But gaze, O darling, in mine eyes;
Let me, O love, thy mirror be!
Till thou dost see what in them lies—
Till thou dost there thy true self see.

BENNETT BELLMAN.

It Should Be Understood.

[New York Tribune.]

The Anarchists are to die, not for exercising the right of free speech, and not alone for inciting to murder and for conspiring to murder—which would be enough to hang them—but for actual complicity in murders committed. It is time these facts were understood.

Mammon Never Slumbers or Sleeps.

[Epoch.]

Mr. Hayseed (to wife who is returned from church): What was the sermon about?

Mrs Hayseed: Suthin' about Joseph goin' daun to Egypt to buy corn.

Mr. Hayseed: Did the dominie say what corn's wuth daun there?

At Bar Harbor.

Young Gallant: Miss Mabel, why so pensive? We have been sitting here gazing out upon the ocean for over an hour and you have scarcely spoken a word.

Miss Mabel: I'm lonesome, that's all.

The man who robs you on the road
A highwayman is he;
The grocer giving you light weight
A low-weigh man must be.

A Striking Work.

"All But" is the title of a story by Rose Terry Cooke. Probably the history of a billy goat.

Important to Tax-Payers.

The beautiful Schumacher tract, lying on the south side of Pico street about 1,600 feet this side of terminus of the electric road, has been recently sold to a syndicate who are now offering the same in lots at low prices, $300 and upwards, on easy terms. This tract, on account of its proximity to the center of the city, being only thirty minutes' ride from First street, on a car line already constructed and running, not promised in the dim future, its five-cent fares, its high elevation, its fine mountain views, its surety of increase in values, being in the course of the natural growth of the city, and above all, its being already a center, with a postoffice station located and a church soon to be built, offers more inducements to investors than any in the market today, a fact recognized by one of our shrewdest real-estate men, who on first sight secured a block. Free carriage or free tickets on the electric road will be furnished to any one desirous of purchasing.

THE Central Labor Union of New York threatens a general strike in case the Anarchists are executed. They may get more strike than they want.

ARTHUR O'CONNOR and Sir Thomas Grattan Esmond, both members of the British Parliament, addressed a Land League meeting at Des Moines, Iowa, yesterday. Gov. Larrabee presided.

ON last Saturday one of our contemporaries published an account of a meeting between Hattie Woolsteen and her father. Hattie being here and her father in Illinois, the meeting, or the account of it, was very much stretched.

A FIERCE war of words was carried on at the meeting of the Central Labor Union yesterday in New York. The Socialists wanted the Union to openly avow sympathy with the condemned Anarchists, and the George men opposed the taking of such action. All animals that roar are not asses.

PROF. FELIX ADLER addressed the Society of Ethical Culture yesterday in New York. In speaking of the Anarchists, he said he had a horror of the methods whereby they had sought to attain their ends. He did not think that they should be put to death—"they should be quarantined as we quarantine bears or cholera germs." Isn't it better to kill a cholera germ than to quarantine it?

A SHORT, rotund, pompous-appearing man was pointed out to us on the street yesterday. It was Sam Braunhart, one of the San Francisco sand-lot lights, whose lurid liver and shining gall flashed for a time athwart the political horizon of Lunar California. Braunhart served twice in the Assembly—once as a sand-lotter and once as a Democrat. In the Assembly he was known as "the gentleman from Judea."

BEGORRA, Tim, they're goin' to hang the Anarchists.

Anarchists! Phat the divil are thim? Och, murtha! Thare tachers from Jurminy; an' quare min th' are, with big eyes an' hair growin' out o' thare ears—an' tachin' the wurruld that wan man's es good es another.

Well, thin, Moike, by the mortal gob, they're tachin' jist roight. Always barrin' the Chineman, one man's es good es another and a —— soight better.

LOS ANGELES is not a hot city. It is warm; pleasantly warm the year round. In such a city men, women, children and animals require more moisture than do the men, women, children and animals of colder localities. There should be at least two drinking fountains in every block in the center of the city. This would be pleasant. It would be useful. To the people at large it would be profitable. In the end it would come to be regarded as characteristic of the City of the Angels.

THE Herald alleges as a fact, and bemoans the allegation, that the Republican press looks with favor upon the growth of the George Labor party because the growth of that party tends to disrupt and destroy the Democratic organization. If the growth of the Labor party will bring about the result feared by the Herald, then a good thing will have resulted from the agitation of George's vagaries. It is perfectly right and proper that the Republican press should view without tears the demise of the Democratic party. The Herald should not be so harsh with the labor leaders. We wot of a time—and no remote time either—when the editor of our morning co-league was a very prominent Labor party leader; when he did his level best to knock the bottom out of California's Democracy; when he mourned the failure of his noble effort, and when the Republican press mourned with him.

IMPRESSIONS.

Yesterday's edition of THE TIMES numbered 10,000 copies, and the paper being a double one, there were 20,000 full sheets, requiring 40,000 impressions from the press.

The paper used in this large edition weighed 1200 pounds.

The sheets, if placed side by side and end to end, would cover an area over twenty-nine miles in length by nearly twenty-two in width—an area equal to a pretty large slice of Los Angeles county.

The paper contained 112 columns in all—53½ columns of reading matter and 58½ columns of advertisements.

These statements are not published with the primary object of lacerating the feelings of any disheartened, disgruntled, jealous or way-behind "contrumpery," but are merely given as a cold-blooded calculation in truth-telling figures—as, in short, a rock-ribbed and iron-plated fact. Advertisers will whip out their little mem-books and make a note on't.

Improved Press Facilities.

The steady and rapid increase in the regular circulation of THE TIMES makes it incumbent upon the publishers to speedily improve and increase their press facilities. Six months ago it was not expected that a faster press than the good Hoe now in use would be required for a long time, but experience has already proven that that calculation did not "reach." The edition has outgrown our present press facilities, and new and faster machinery is required even now. It will be provided as soon as practicable. A superior modern press, capable of throwing off hourly more than 10,000 perfect papers—folded, pasted, cut and counted—has been decided upon for THE TIMES. The company might have had a perfecting press in at this time had it chosen to accept the offer of a machine not precisely suited to its requirements, but it was thought wisest to wait a little longer and have built to order a web press, in every respect answering to the requirements of the situation.

The new machine will be running in good time, and will prove a valuable acquisition to the establishment, enabling us to issue THE TIMES with increased celerity and success.

TO ADVERTISERS.

Sworn Circulation of the Los Angeles Daily Times.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 26	6,864
THURSDAY, Oct. 27	6,888
FRIDAY, Oct. 28	6,888
SATURDAY, Oct. 29	6,864
Total for the week	49,707
Average daily circulation	7,101

W. C. WILLIAMS, Superintendent of Circulation.
G. W. CRAWFORD, Pressman.

AFFIDAVIT.

Before me, George J. Clarke, a notary public in and for the county of Los Angeles, personally appeared W. C. Williams, superintendent of circulation, and George W. Crawford, pressman of the Times-Mirror Company, and, being first duly sworn, upon their oaths state, from personal knowledge, that the above statement and table of figures, showing the circulation of the LOS ANGELES DAILY TIMES for the week ended Saturday, October 29, 1887, is true and correct.

[SEAL.] GEO. J. CLARKE, Notary Public.

The above statement shows a very large and rapid increase in the circulation of THE TIMES. Referring to the record, we find that the increase has been at least 33 per cent. since the 1st of September, not less than 50 per cent. within three months, and nearly 100 per cent. within six months.

While calling the attention of advertisers to these undeniable facts, we desire at the same time to say something further that will be found pertinent in this connection.

For many months past the pressure upon our advertising columns has been so great that we have been forced to issue extra sheets, or supplements, (of either two or four pages each) on six days in the week, in order to accommodate the advertising "spread."

It being impossible to confine the whole volume of advertising within the limits of the main sheet, and at the same time print the news, the only recourse has been to issue these extra sheets and require each large advertiser to take his chance of "going into the supplement" every few days.

This enforced practice is objectionable to both advertisers and readers, and we have been aware of it all along, but could not avoid it. The practice is equally objectionable to the publishers, who desire to give their patrons full value for their money, which they feel they do not get when their business notices are thrown out of the main sheet and into the contemned "fly-sheet."

These extra sheets are inconvenient to handle, fold and insert, expensive to print, delay the issue, and are not attractive to the average reader any more than to the advertiser, even when they contain what is designed for "mighty interesting reading." All hands, so far as we can ascertain, want them abolished.

In order to work a reform in this particular, and in so doing render a substantial service to the class most interested—the advertisers—we have determined to make an effort to contract the total area occupied by advertisements in THE TIMES sufficiently to bring them all within the main sheet on week days, leaving our Sunday issues as a vent for advertisers who may desire to purchase extra space and secure large display on those days.

The Sunday issues will continue to be exceptionally large papers—never less than twelve-page, generally sixteen-page sheets.

In order to accomplish the desirable result aimed at, we invite the willing coöperation of our advertising friends, particularly of the larger of our patrons. We can show them that they will derive real benefit from the proposed change.

A considerable reduction in the space [illegible] will be necessary in order to bring the whole volume of our advertising within a single eight-page sheet. It can, however, be brought within less than forty columns without unduly crowding anybody.

Unless this is done, we will be unable to guarantee advertisers fixed positions, or secure them against the chances of being frequently thrown into the supplement.

When it is done, however, we are confident that we will have accomplished a reform of great value to the advertiser himself, without doing any injury to the reader; and we believe that both classes will in the end agree with us in this claim.

Many experienced, skillful, judicious and economical advertisers find the best results from using the columns of metropolitan dailies moderately during the week, and then making special "spreads" in the Sunday issues, which always print additional sheets and extra large editions.

We are convinced that this is the true policy for THE TIMES advertisers to pursue, and we do not hesitate to submit our views for their consideration, believing that in the way suggested larger net returns to the advertiser can be achieved for less outlay, month in and month out, than by the more wasteful process of crowding their "extra display" advertisements into every issue of the paper throughout the week.

The value of displayed and extra large advertisements in a paper is only relative, at best; it is not absolute. When all occupy moderate space, each has an equal advantage with all the rest.

Readers come to look eagerly for the appearance of the Sunday edition of their favorite journal, and there being always on that day more time for reading, the paper is more closely and carefully perused, and its contents more thoroughly digested than is possible with the every-day issues. The Sunday edition is, therefore, par excellence, the sheet for the advertiser who wants to display his business announcements before the public at length.

We desire, then, to get rid of the use of extra sheets altogether, or as far as practicable, on week-days, and to continue printing on Sundays exceptionally large and attractive papers.

To bring the matter about, and the business directly before the advertisers concerned, they will be soon called upon in person by a representative of this office, when, without doubt, a satisfactory readjustment can be reached in each case.

It is hoped that the "new deal" may be put into effect within a week or ten days. It can easily be done, if our advertising patrons will "stand in" with us on this proposition; and we do not doubt but they will see the advantage to themselves of doing so.

An Apologist of Boggs.

"Hon. John Boggs, one of the clearest-headed business men in California, and a man of independent fortune, after giving his gratuitous services to the State as prison director for nearly five years, is receiving his reward from the Republican press."—[Herald.

Evidently our contemporary doesn't know John Boggs; or, if it does, it knows him only by proxy.

Between John Boggs and our morning contempt there is this marked distinction: Boggs is a small man, built on the pollywog plan. That is to say, he runs mainly to head.

That John B. is a good business man is true—true, at least, in its sordid sense; he is too good a business man to do anything gratuitously.

The Hon. John represents just about ninety pounds of Boggs, and there is no more human nature in his make-up than there is in a rutabaga.

He is "one of the clearest-headed business men in California"—you bet! A bank president in Colusa, a resident and speculator in San Francisco, a swamp-land and levee commissioner, a prison director and a State Senator all at one and the same time, are facts that, in the eyes of John's latest apologist, prove him to be a "clear-headed business man."

The argument is one, too, the force of which, in a certain sense, the "Republican press" must, perforce, admit. There is no doubting the fact that Pollywog Boggs can cover more official ground and swipe more salaries and perquisites than any other ninety pounds of humanity in America.

The Indian Question.

A large portion of Round Valley, in the northern part of this State, was some years ago set aside as an Indian reservation. Of late some white settlers, mainly sheep and cattlemen, have located there. Complaint being made on behalf of the Indians, the War Department ordered Gen. Howard to remove the whites, and to carry out that purpose Capt. Shaw, of the regular army, with a detachment of troops, was dispatched to Round Valley.

In the meantime the settlers applied to the State courts and obtained a writ of injunction, which writ was placed in the hands of the Sheriff of Mendocino county. Thus armed, the Sheriff started in pursuit of Capt. Shaw with the intention of effecting his arrest.

Now, it was the plain duty of the Sheriff to arrest Capt. Shaw, and it was the plain duty of Capt. Shaw not to submit to arrest. Here was a dilemma out of which no peaceable way seemed to lead, and which must have ended in bloodshed were it not for the intervention of the Secretary of War, who ordered the military out of Round Valley.

A few weeks ago a parallel case occurred in Arizona, and, as the great farther West fills up with population, such cases are likely to multiply.

It is a notorious fact that the old-time management of the Indian question—the military management—is repugnant to the people of the States and Territories of the West Coast. It has lacked the all-powerful essential of success. It failed with the Nez Perces, it failed with the Klamaths and Modocs, and, so far as Arizona is concerned, were it not for the blood and treasure it has cost, it might well be stigmatized a roaring farce.

This is casting no reflection upon the miliary personel in Arizona or elsewhere. The several officers in command have performed all that was required of them, and they have accomplished all that the circumstances of the case would permit. So far as a final settlement of the Indian problem is concerned, failure and disaster must inhere in any attempt at solution by means of the old-time military plan.

Take the military away. Place the Indians upon a level with all other [illegible] the people of the several States and Territories of the Far West, by the cold and unswerving machinery of law, will soon bring the red-skinned desperadoes to terms, and forever settle the Indian question.

EVERY few days the public is gravely told by the furious but futile "concern across the way"—to wit, the crooked-whisky Trombone—that THE TIMES has "antagonized" something or somebody in a highly vicious and reckless manner; that it has made a violent and virulent assault upon some "leading interest;" that it has, with tiger-like rapacity, leaped upon the frame of some body, society, sect, party or class; that it has with ghoulish glee seized by the throat some innocent babe, some ancient and leather-like female, or some mummified octogenarian; that it has lashed the liver out of some "smart politition" or inchoate statesman—all to the detriment of justice, good taste, good morals, the State, the Nation and the world—God, man and the Old Scratch. All this the public has been told from time to time, and the Trombone's printed picture of the wicked TIMES upon which we have fallen is a highly hideous and truly terrible one. All the same, however, the populace continue to buy the boycotted paper, and THE TIMES manages to wag along and increase its circulation in an extremely exasperating manner. (See sworn statement of circulation.)

PASADENA proposes to have three city parks, and sites for the same are already selected. The rapid and unprecedented growth of Los Angeles and the hurly-burly of business consequent, has, perhaps, tended to keep the question of public parks in the background. It is full time to pay some attention to this matter. Some eminent writer has termed public parks "the lungs of a city," and while our city is still young, and still in the full vigor of growth, ample provisions should be made to provide it with lungs sufficient in size and number to meet the requirements of a more mature age.

CHAMBERLAIN, the English member of the Fishery Commission, affects to be in fear of being kidnapped or assassinated. He left England yesterday surrounded by detectives, and while here will be guarded by them. He should have taken the advice of THE TIMES and gone to the springs.

MEN OF THE STATE.

Col. Wilson of Chico, Butte county, is in San Francisco.

J. M. Scanland of the Santa Paula Graphic proposes to dispose of his paper and to locate in Los Angeles.

Ex-Judge Robert Ferrel of San Francisco commenced life as a typo, and his proof as a printer is said to have been cleaner than his record as a judge.

Hon. Wilcox, the "Mariposa blacksmith," many times Representative from Mariposa county, also abandoned the forge, not for the law, but for politics.

Senator James Fair is spying out the mining values of Iowa Hill. The Senator is an old miner, and he ought to be able to judge of mines and mining values.

Judge James G. Maguire is another disciple of Vulcan, who quit the honest calling of the grimy god for the realms of law and the stormy field of political blatherskiting.

Hon. William F. White, Workingmen's candidate for Governor in 1878, and late Bank Commissioner, was originally a San Francisco drayman, as was also the chief of his party—Denis Kearney.

Richard Melrose, for fourteen years proprietor and publisher of the Anaheim Gazette, being about to remove to this city, is to be tendered a farewell banquet by the citizens of Anaheim this evening.

Ex-Gov. John G. Downey was born in Ireland. He settled in Los Angeles as a druggist. He was elected Lieutenant-Governer, and became Chief Executive of the State upon the election of Gov. Latham to the United States Senate.

Superior Judge Armstrong of Sacramento is a lame man, white-bearded and patriarchal in appearance. He was originally an Amador county blacksmith, and while working at his trade received the injury which produced his lameness and caused him to abandon the anvil for the law.

Senator "Pat" Reddy is a native of Rhode Island. He has but one arm. He was formerly a "fighter" for a mining company in the days when rival companies settled their differences by force of arms. In a personal quarrel, growing out of his character and calling, he lost his arm. While in hospital Reddy resolved to reform. He did so. He studied law, married and entered politics.

James O'Brien of Smartville, a very wealthy hydraulic miner, and head of the Miners' Society organization to fight the Farmers' Alliance on the débris question, was in Sacramento last Saturday. Mr. O'Brien is an evidence of what native talent and the stick-to-it quality may accomplish. He never had the advantages of education, and worked as a day laborer where he now rules as a lord.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] The jury in the case of James McCord, charged with jury-bribing, after being out about twelve hours, came into court this morning and reported that they could not reach an agreement and were discharged. The jury stood seven for acquittal and five for conviction.

Judge Sullivan, addressing the counsel engaged in the case, said the only course open was to discharge the jury. It appeared to be utterly impossible for them to agree. E. T. Preston, attorney for McCord, said he had no desire to punish the jury by sending them back to reconsider their verdict, and that he was quite willing that they be discharged. They were discharged accordingly. McCord's bonds were fixed at $25,000, which he furnished and left the court with his friends. His bondsmen are John McCord, A. W. Scott, C. B. Stone and Jacob Eppinger.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

A Bursting Boiler Results in the Death of Two Men.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] A boiler explosion took place this morning at the Terrace Baths, Alameda, causing the death almost instantaneously of Robert Haley, proprietor of the bathing establishment, and seriously if not fatally injuring Charles Becker, an employé. The boiler operated an engine which was used to pump water from the bay into an inclosure, and Becker started a fire as usual this morning in the furnace. He noticed that steam rose very rapidly, and went out of the engine-room for Haley. Becker not finding him, he returned to the room, when the steam guage showed a pressure of nearly 100 pounds. Haley had in the meantime come down to the baths, and Becker shouted for him to come to the engine-room. He did so, and entering the room, opened the door of the furnace. Becker stood just back of him. A cold draught of air was let in and in about a second the boiler and engine were lifted from the floor and struck against the north side of the building, breaking one-half into splinters, and flew through the air a distance of thirty feet, when it fell into the bathing enclosure. The explosion created a loud detonation similar to the report of a cannon, and Haley was found lying on his back alongside the spot where the boiler stood. Blood was pouring out of his mouth. He gasped once or twice and expired. Becker was lying about three feet away and was unconscious. Haley's throat was cut by a flying piece of iron, his left temple was dented in, and his head and breast were badly scalded. His tongue was almost severed near its roots.

NOTES FROM 'FRISCO.

A $8000 Fire—Return of a Fishing Vessel—Big Blaze at Traver.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] A fire involving the loss of nearly $8000 worth of property occurred early this morning. The fire originated by the explosion of a coal oil lamp in a two-story frame dwelling. The flames spread rapidly, destroying eight small dwellings. The insurance is small.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

TRAVER, Oct. 30.—A special to the Examiner says: A fire broke out in the kitchen of the Traver Hotel at 3 p.m. today. Every effort to arrest the progress of the fire was of no avail until it had consumed about half of the business portion of the town. The Traver Hotel was burned first, then came Doody's saloon, Shelton's variety store, Louis Rose's saloon, West, Ross & Co.'s real-estate office, John Dahle, boot and shoemaker, and S. Wolff, general merchandise. Loss and insurance is as follows: S. Wolff, loss $20,000 to $34,000; insurance about $12,000; insurance in the Sun of Boston, the Underwriters and one other. The Traver Hotel, owned by L. Semorile and leased by G. F. Alexander; loss to Semorile, $4100; insurance, $2600; Louis Rose, loss, $5000; insurance, $2250; P. J. Doody, loss, $3,100, fully insured; West, Ross & Co., loss, $500; insurance, $200; J. Dahle, loss about $400; insurance not learned; Shelton, loss, $300 to $400; insurance not learned; Alexander, $3000; insurance, $900.

A BIG OIL CATCH.

Today the whaling bark Josephine, Capt. Lapham, arrived, thirty days from the Okhotsk Sea. She brought 14,000 pounds of bone and 1375 barrels of oil.

Mining Excitement.

NOGALES (Ariz.), Oct. 30.—Parties just returned from the Blue Mountains say the reports of the discovery of rich placer diggings are over-rated. They state that good placer digging have been found, but water is too far for convenience. Quartz mining, they believe, will prove a rich strike. Many miners are in the hills prospecting. It is said that a number of the old mines were worked by Jesuit priests years ago.

Fatally Shot.

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 30.—Thomas Ryan shot William Denver in the head today, which will probably prove a fatal wound. Denver is a blacksmith and wagon-maker, and Ryan is a carriage painter employed by Denver. Denver owed Ryan money for wages. Ryan asked for his wages, and Denver threatened to kill him. They met again on Main street, had a few words and Ryan shot him.

A Murderous Poker-Player.

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 30.—About midnight Saturday night Thomas G. Christie, aged 27, was shot by Wright Farmer with a revolver, the shot taking effect about an inch below the heart. The quarrel originated over a poker game. Christie is in a dying condition, paralysis having set in from the wound down.

A Confessed Murderer.

REDDING, Oct. 30.—The report comes from the Sheriff of Sloane, Lane county, Or., that one Spangle confessed to murdering Henderson, who was shot a week ago on a stage near Redding. Spangle is known here as a hard case. The shooting was the result of a personal feud.

Fresno City Bonds.

FRESNO, Oct. 30.—The vote for issuing bonds of the city to the amount of $35,000 for building school houses, and $35,000 for fire purposes and water protection, resulted favorably, 219 votes being cast in favor and 2 against.

The Locomotive Engineers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has concluded its consideration of the life-insurance organization connected with the order, and made some slight amendments in its bylaws. The convention will probably end by Tuesday.

Home Rulers at Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Oct. 30.—Arthur O'Connor, M. P., and Sir Thomas Grattan Esmond, M. P., arrived here today. Tonight they addressed a great mass meeting on the subject of "Home Rule in Ireland." Delega- [illegible] Gov. Larrabee, mayor, and great enthusiasm prevailed. A subscription of sympathy and support was ordered to be sent to Parnell.

Secretary Whitney's Health.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Secretary of the Navy Whitney spent the day quietly at his home in this city. Dr. Loomis called to see him in the morning, and pronounced him better, but repeated his order to keep absolutely quiet for several days.

The Nine-Hour Law at Denver.

DENVER (Colo.), Oct. 30.—At a meeting of Typographical Union No. 49 this evening, it was agreed to adopt the nine-hour system. A reduction was made in the schedule of prices from $21 per week to $20.

Clearing House Report.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—The managers of the leading clearing houses in the United States report the total gross exchanges for the week ending October 29, 1887, to be $922,277,896, an increase of 8.1 per cent.

Died.

HARTFORD (Ct.), Oct. 30.—Mrs. Anthony Barclay died Saturday night, aged 93 years. She was the widow of the English Consul at New York.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

ALBANY (N. Y.), Oct. 30.—Larabee's bakery and several other buildings burned tonight. The losses aggregate $200,000.

SPORTING NOTES.

Denvers Defeat the Philadelphias—Other Ball Games—A Whipped Pugilist Squeals for the Police.

By Telegraph to The Times.

DENVER, Oct. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] The Philadelphia club, on its way to the Pacific Coast, played here this afternoon with the Denver club. There were present 2000 people.

SCORE.

Denver	1	0	2	0	0	3	7	0	1	—14
Philadelphia	0	2	2	0	1	1	5	0	0	—11

Runs earned—Denver, 6; Philadelphia, 1.
Errors—Denver, 6; Philadelphia, 4.
Base hits—Denver, 21; Philadelphia, 19.
Batteries—Denver, Bates and Wilson; Philadelphia, Ryan and McGuire.

GOOD BALL AT SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—Lorrigan, who was in the box for the Pioneers, had a hard day of it. Though the score shows that thirteen hits were made off of him, eight of the number were spectrals, and but five clean, safe raps. The decisions of Umpire Sheridan seemed almost invariably against him. It was enough to discourage a veteran, but Lorrigan kept up steady work. His eight brother players fielded almost faultlessly, and pulled out ahead in a game that most every one present thought was lost to them. Incell was in the box for the Haverlys. Of eleven hits credited to the Pioneers off his delivery, eight were safe ones, including one three-bagger and two doubles. His support was not as good as his work in the box deserved, Bennett and Donohue making costly errors. In the seventh inning the score stood 6 to 6 for each club, the Haverlys having made two runs in the first, one in the third, two in the fourth and one in the sixth. The Pioneers made one run in the third inning, one in the fifth, two in the sixth and two in the seventh. In the eighth inning the Pioneers managed to score a run. That gave them the game, as their opponents failed to score in either the eighth or ninth innings. Score: Pioneers, 7; Haverlys, 6.

THE ALTAS WIN.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 30.—In the base-ball game today the home club had everything their own way from the start. The Greenhood and Morans came up without a battery, Borchers failing to arrive, McDonald suffering from a broken finger, and there being nobody in the nine capable of holding Knell's pitching. Blakiston, Lange and McCord alternated as pitchers, and Knell and Mike Fisher as catchers. It was a picnic for the Altas, and the audience was kept in a good humor by the leather chasing of the Greenhood and Morans. Flint, especially, was strong at the bat, smashing the ball every time he was at the bat, and twice for two baggers. The game was not worth detailing. Following is the score: Altas, 23; Greenhood and Morans, 7.

A BOOBY PUGILIST.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—A three-round prize-fight occurred last night at Plainfield, N. J., between J. Gillen of Newark and Michael Mullen, a younger brother of Pat Mullen, the English champion. There was no science displayed. At the finish Gillen hit Mullen on the left side of the neck, when he fell like a log and then yelled loudly for the police. The fight was given to Mullen.

A DEPARTMENT GHOST.

A Pension Office Watchman Seen Three Years After His Death.

[Washington Republican.]

"I saw John Jones last night," said a watchman in the Pension Office, addressing a group of fellow-watchmen there before business hours.

"John Jones!" exclaimed one. "He's been dead these three years."

"I saw him last night. You know he used to sit and walk in the third gallery. There never was a man so devoted to his duty as Jones. Not a minute late o' mornings. Didn't like to go when 4 o'clock came and his time was out. Well, I was over here on the south side last night and looked across and there saw Jones in his usual chair, sure as you are alive."

"Certain?"

"Entirely certain. I walked round, nearer and nearer and nearer; there he sat yet. I came close; he was gone, chair and all. It was his ghost. He can't keep away from the Pension Office."

Notwithstanding the solemnity of the narrative, doubt prevailed in the little company; but an old soldier present spoke up:

"I believe it. When I was in hospital before Petersburg I saw several ghosts. A number of our fellows died there, among them Joe Peters, who had been helped to a wooden leg. After he had gone he used to come again, and often, and stump, stump along the hall at night. Joe was kind hearted. One of those times I heard him say to a companion: 'Hello, Bill, how's your sore leg?'"

Incredulity disappeared.

The Gall of the Michigan Tramp.

[Detroit Free Press.]

A Wayne county farmer, who had a little time to spare during the drought, went at it and created seven artificial mounds, to resemble graves, in a field close to the road. Sign boards were put up and labeled: "Tramp No. 1," "Tramp No. 2," and so on through, and when the work was finished the granger went up to the house with a grin on his face and said to his wife:

"That 'ere dodge will beat all the laws in Michigan to keep tramps away."

Breakfast was not yet over next morning when there was a knock on the kitchen door, and the farmer opened it to find five gaunt tramps standing in a half circle.

"You here!" he yelled as soon as he could credit his senses. "Didn't you see those graves down by the road?"

"We did, sir," answered the oldest tramp for all. "That's just why we stopped. We wanted to know if they came to their death by over-eating?"

Not a Soul Survives to Tell of the Disaster.

Distressing Accident to an Aeronaut at St. Louis.

The Crow Indians Ready to Fight, and Trouble Anticipated—Removal of Troops from Utah—Death of Miss Arlington, the Actress.

By Telegraph to The Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The Inter-Ocean's special from Manitowoc says: The first particulars of the wrecked propeller Vernon were received here this morning. Reports say she foundered off Two Rivers. A passing tug picked up a pilot-house with the name "Vernon" on it, and five life preservers, off Two Rivers. Owing to this fact probably not a soul of twenty-five or thirty people aboard were saved.

The cause of the terrible disaster will probably remain a mystery forever. It is quite generally believed here that not a single soul has survived as it would be impossible for any person to live in such a sea and exposed to the intense cold that prevailed on the night of the wreck. Many relatives of those on board came here on the propeller Lawrence, this evening, to obtain all the particulars possible concerning the lost boat. All places where information would likely be obtained were visited, and the news was of a most discouraging nature. They abandoned all hope of ever seeing their friends and relatives who were lost. It is reported tonight that Boiler Inspectors Reed and Fitzgerald of Milwaukee were on board the ill-fated propeller and are undoubtedly among the lost. A patrol of the life-saving crew at Two Rivers was kept on duty all night, but up to the last report no bodies had been found. The captain of the steamer Lawrence estimates the number of people on the ill-fated vessel at about fifty persons. The steam barge Burroughs of Milwaukee is overdue, and many anxious inquiries are received as to her whereabouts.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 30.—Referring to the wreck of the Vernon, the captain of the life-saving crew at Two Rivers, describes the storm as the worst ever seen by him on the lake. The waves rose to a height of thirty or forty feet. It is his impression that no one has survived the wreck. "It was bitter cold on the lake," he said, "and a person could not have stood the exposure over night. The spray dashing over the men clinging to the wreckage must have frozen as it fell and completely encased the unfortunates, if indeed they held on long enough to permit such a thing. My impression is that they all are at the bottom of the lake." Neither at Manitowoc or Two Rivers were any traces of the lost vessel to be heard of yesterday, either by vessels arriving there or by means of tugs going a few miles out. Capt. Hawkins of the schooner William Home, arriving in Milwaukee this morning, reports passing three dead bodies Saturday afternoon about six miles southwest of Manitowoc. One body was that of a woman with long black hair. She had a life-preserver on. The other two bodies were those of men.

THE CROW WAR.

Defiant Attitude of Sword Bearer and His Braves.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—A Ft. Custer, Mont., special says: Three companies of the Fifth Infantry, Maj. Snyder in command, equipped for field service and with transport wagons, have been ordered to the Crow agency, and are forming for the march. Monday will be general muster day at the post, when a cavalry force will probably take the field and war begin, if war it is, in earnest.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 30.—A Crow Agency (Mont.) special to the Pioneer-Press reports that Sword Bearer and his band made demonstrations at the agency yesterday, unslinging their rifles as if about to attack the single company stationed there, but immediately changing their defiant aspect when Maj. Snyder's battalion appeared on the brow of the hill, three miles away.

Sword Bearer immediately crossed the Little Horn River and withdrew up the bottom. The cavalry is expected to move Monday. The excitement among the Indians is intense, and a false move by the authorities or the wrong Indians killed will precipitate a general outbreak, as the faith of the Indians in Sword Bearer's supernatural power is unlimited.

Distressing Balloon Accident.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30.—At the closing performance of the Open-air Spectacle a terrible accident occurred, resulting in the death of Antonio Infantes. Tonight being the last of the season for the Spectacle, Antonio Infantes proposed to make a balloon ascension. Shortly after 9 o'clock the balloon, a hot-air affair, was brought on to the stage before an audience of 2000. The air-ship started upward quickly and had obtained a height of 500 feet, when it collapsed, and the aeronaut plunged to the ground holding desperately to the ropes which held the sagging convass. The descent was very rapid, and as he came down before the audience he was thrown upon an iron rod from which rockets were being fired, and death ensued immediately.

Death of a Noted Actress.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Maggie Arlington died at 11:30 tonight. This well-known actress, whose real name was Ryerson, was a member of the California Stock Company. Some days ago Miss Arlington received severe injuries by falling down a dumb-waiter shaft in her home, and breaking both legs and her left arm on the cellar floor, sixty-five feet below. While still ill she contracted pneumonia, which is the direct cause of her death.

Removal of Troops.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The Adjutant General of the Department of Missouri has issued orders for the few companies of infantry now at Ft. Douglas, Utah, to proceed to Chicago and take up a permanent station on the Highwood military tract, which was presented to the Government by Chicago this year. Next spring it is understood the tract will be converted into a large military post and supply depot.

The Highest Church in Europe.

[Bundner Tagblatt.]

The very highest church in Europe is the Pilgrimage Chapel at St. Maria de Ziteit, above Salux, in the canton of Graubunden. It lies 2434 meters above the sea level—nearly 8000 feet high, above the forest, near the limits of perpetual show. It is only open during the summer time of that region, or as the folks thereabouts reckon, from St. John the Baptist's Day to St. Michael's Day, and is used only by the Alp herders, who remain there through the summer with their cows and goats, and occasionally by hunters in search of the chamois and marmon. All the inhabitants of Salux climb up thither on Midsummer Day to assist at the first mass and hear the first sermon of the year. And there is also a crowded congregation on Michaelmas Day at the last service of the year. From time to time a few stray pilgrims from the Graubunden Oberland and the Tyrol find their way there. The second highest church, probably, in Europe—that of Monstein—also open only in the summer, belongs to Graubunden. At our visit the hale old preacher had five foreign turists for his congregation.

Prof. Felix Adler Pleads for Their Lives.

A Monkey and Parrot Time Between Socialists and Georgites.

Army Officials Protest Against the Unlawful Treatment of Indians.

A Reign of Terror in Southern Sinaloa—New Line of English Steamers on the Amazon—Cardinal Gibbons at San Antonio.

By Telegraph to The Times.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] Prof. Felix Adler addressed the Society of Ethical Culture at Chickering Hall this morning on the case of the condemned Chicago Anarchists. He said he had been asked to address a mass meeting arranged in behalf of the condemned, but felt constrained to refuse. He looked upon these men as criminals. "Every fibre of my moral nature is outraged by the methods by which they sought to obtain their ends," said the professor. "The Anarchists are the worst enemies of society, and should be suppressed. Yet I rise to enter pleas in their behalf because I am in favor of absolute purity in judicial processes and impartiality on the face of public excitement. I speak for them as I would for my worst enemy if injustice were about to be done to him. If these men are hung they will be looked upon as heroes, which they are not. Society has a right to and should quarantine these men, just the same as the bearers of cholera germs."

Mr. Adler reviewed the trial, and as he repeated part of Fielden's speech there was some applause in the gallery of the hall. This was at once met with an outburst of kisses, and the speaker ceased in his discourse to say that any demonstration by the audience was not permitted by the rules of the society. He afterward said that in his opinion the prisoners should have had separate trials, and that Lingg, Schwab and Fielden should be imprisoned for life, and the others sentenced to short terms.

WRANGLE OVER INDIANS.

Alleged Shameful Treatment of Redskins in Arizona.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Some weeks ago the military authorities of Arizona Territory reported to the War Department that the Sheriff of Pina county held warrants, the legality of which were questioned, for the arrest of Eskimazin and twenty-seven other Indians living on the San Pedro River, in that Territory, upon charges of grand larceny and resisting arrest, and had called upon Capt. Pierce, the commanding military officer at San Carlos Agency, who is also acting Indian agent, to aid him in making the arrest. Gen. Miles, in reporting the matter to Gen. Howard, expressed the opinion that the attempted arrest of these twenty-eight Indians by local civil officers would prove a serious matter, if indeed, it did not involve the Territory in an Indian war. The last act of hostility on the part of the whites was the arrest of six of the Indians, it is said, upon false charges, and the attempted arrest of the twenty-eight others referred to above. The Sheriff of Pina county has made a demand upon Capt. Pierce for the surrender of the accused, which on October 10th, the date of Capt. Pierce's letter of transmittal, had not been complied with. Indian officials pronounce the affair as a shameful outrage upon peaceable and law-abiding Indians, and will take such steps as may be necessary to restore the Indians to their abandoned property.

New Line of Steamers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—Advices are received from Panama to October 8th, stating that arrangements have been perfected for the running of a line of English steamers on the Upper Amazon and its tributaries. Reports of fabulously rich gold mines come from the Guanaco and Remblinos fields, in the mountains south of Bolivia. In the town of Angal, Chili, good gold-bearing quartz has been discovered by a traveler, among the stones used in building.

The village of Miranda, Chili, has been swept away by a flood.

Blood on the Moon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The Central Labor Union today had another turbulent meeting. Henry George men and Socialists called each other "fools," "loafers," and "liars," and there were several free fights. The chairman expelled two members for the session, but it took nearly an hour to get the offensive ones out of the door. At last a communication was read from the Federated Trades Unions, proposing that a general strike should take place on November 1st in case the Chicago Anarchists were executed. It was referred to a committee and the meeting adjourned.

Cardinal Gibbons in Texas.

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 30.—Cardinal Gibbons arrived here last night from Oregon. He was met at the station by the Mayor and an immense delegation of citizens, who prevailed on him to stop over in the city. Today he celebrated high mass at San Fernando's Cathedral, the most ancient church edifice on the continent. He left in the afternoon to visit his brother, who is a merchant at New Orleans.

Bad Bandits.

NOGALES (Ariz.), Oct. 30.—Bernal, a famous Mexican bandit, and his gang have terrorized the people of Southern Sinaloa, and the soldiers are not able to capture him. A number of soldiers stationed at Sonora River have been ordered south to assist in capturing the gang. In some instances people in large communities and villages have been murdered and robbed.

Women Poachers.
[London Times.]

The Ruthin police have made a curious capture. Sergt. Evans and two constables, having reason to suspect the home-coming of a gang of well-known poachers, placed themselves on the highway near the town, and when the men came along searched them without result. As it was obvious from the state of their clothes that they had been poaching, the officers again concealed themselves, and presently saw three women crossing the fields to a place, where they remained some time. When they were returning the officers insisted on searching them. Their intelligence was amply rewarded, for the women had slung twenty-seven rabbits on three strings and tied them beneath their dresses. In this way they were also carrying off two long lengths of rabbit netting. They at the outset protested that the protuberances were ordinary "dress improvers," but the officers were obdurate, and at length the twenty-seven rabbits were produced. The women will be brought before the county magistrates on the charge of being in the illegal possession of game.

In Memory of "H. H."

A beautiful memorial to Helen Hunt Jackson and her labors in behalf of the Indians will be the Ramona Indian Girls' School, which is building at Santa Fé, N. M. The building will cost $30,000, and will accommodate 150 pupils. Students will be retained from two to five years. A New York architect contributed the design, which is patterned to some extent on the old cliff dwellings of New Mexico and Arizona. Government aid will largely pay for building the school, but the cost of furnishing must be defrayed by private subscriptions. A fine portrait of Mrs. Jackson has been given, and one rich woman devoted her jewels to the furnishing of a memorial room. Prof. Horatio O. Ladd has charge of the old university at Santa Fé, and has devoted himself to the success of this building.

Apotheosis of Paper.
[Philadelphia Record.]

We knew it would come. The announcement has been made that a paper coffin has been invented and put upon the market. A man may now build his house of paper, eat his dinner from paper plates, wipe his face with a paper handkerchief, buy his wife a paper piano, and go to his grave in a paper coffin. The coffin may be paid for with a piece of paper and the death published on another piece. There are few things more useful than paper.

Wrongly Placed.
[Washington Critic.]

"Young man," said the minister, impressively, "I can see you as you sit at the gaming table last night with a deep flush on your face."

"Excuse me, but you're wrong about that red flush. Bill Jenkins had it in his hand."

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Chamberlain to Make a Tour of America—Wilfred Blunt Talks Straight Turkey to Churchill.

By Telegraph to The Times.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] Wilfred Blunt has written a letter to Randolph Churchill with reference to the latter's speech at Stockton. He says he does not doubt that if Lord Randolph had been at Woodford last Sunday and had known of the doings of the Clanricarde he would have done as the writer did. He concludes as follows: "I am ready to bear hard labor or any other penal treatment which Balfour may decide, and I shall bear him no ill-will; but as concerns the law, he plays with loaded dice. The new Crimes Act is modeled on those hanging commissions which you and I denounced in Egypt five years ago. I hope that if you can spare the time you will attend the hearing of my appeal in January. That would be far better than recommending me to Balfour's mercy, which I don't want."

He ridiculed Balfour's idea of repressing agitation by conferring with the Irish members of the House of Commons. "These members," he said, "are the outposts of an army of 20,000,000 of the Irish race. If this is conspiracy, it is a conspiracy with every element to make rational and great a cause that is unconquerable." Continuing, he said that tenants who had adopted this plan of campaign were sure of a decent roof over their heads this winter and a comforting Christmas dinner, which was more than many out-at-the-elbow rack-renters expected. Wherever the tenants had the manliness to use this plan of campaign and the discipline to stick, it protected their homes, striking fear into the landlords' hearts. After a thousand persons were evicted during the past year only 140 had adopted this plan of campaign. The advantage of his plans were thus proved and would be organized on such a scale this winter as would reward tenants for their efforts. He depeciated outrages, but if patience was necessary, manhood was still more necessary, if they wished to win an Irish Parliament and the ownership of the soil.

CHAMBERLAIN'S SENTIMENTS.

He Believes There Will Never Be a Parliament at Dublin.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] Mr. Chamberlain was interviewed on board the Etruria, at Queenstown, today. He attached no importance to the strictures which certain Canadians and Americans had thought fit to pass upon him. He said: "I shall enter upon my duties unaffected in the slightest degree by any outside hostile criticisms. I do not intend to return to England directly my labors are finished. Not having been in America before, I am awfully anxious to see the country and its institutions. It is also my purpose to visit Canada. It is, therefore, unlikely that I shall return until shortly before the assembling of Parliament." On being questioned regarding home rule, he said he had ceased to be political for a couple of months. He had, however, no hesitation in saying that those who were sanguine of soon seeing a parliament in Dublin would have to wait much longer than they expected. "I will go still farther," he continued, "and say that I am inclined to think that if the great and generous scheme of local government were granted to Ireland, the feeling which is represented as being so intense, especially in the south, in favor of a separate parliament, would gradually die away. They are mere sentiments. I firmly believe it is not beyond the reach of statesmanship to make Ireland peaceable and contented, with a full measure of local government."

HEAVY WINDS IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—A terrific gale raged in the south of England Saturday night. Many buildings were unroofed and there were numerous shipping casualties in the channel. A boat with a party of twelve persons, which left Weymouth for a night's trolling, was capsized, and ten of the party drowned. A sloop was wrecked off Dunkirk and four men drowned.

O'BRIEN'S LAST DAY OF LIBERTY.

DUBLIN, Oct. 30.—At Kanturk today O'Brien eluded the police and addressed an immense crowd of people who were mounted. He said this was probably his last day of liberty for some time, and he was proud to spend it there.

Political.

The Boston Herald predicts that the Republican party will in future be controlled by younger men than Blaine or Sherman—men who have discovered that the South can be divided on the tariff provided the sectional issue is not continued to compact it on the old lines.

Senator Colquitt says: My view is that the reduction of revenue should be made by reducing the tax on all articles of necessity and general consumption in preference to making whisky free. The farmers who comprise the great backbone of the country should not be asked to pay tribute to the business ventures of others.

A Washington correspondent writes that the tariff seems to have precious little to do with the Virginia conflict. The campaign there is merely a fight between the Democracy and Mahoneism. The Republicans are allied to Mahone and they are depending for the capture of the Legislature on the ability of Mahone to hold the colored voters he has purchased in past campaigns.

Kate Field's new entertainment is in the shape of a musical monologue entitled, "Eyes and Ears in London." She is now delivering it to audiences on the Pacific slope.

Mrs. Elizabeth J. Nicholson is proprietor and managing editor of the New Orleans Picayune. She is making a success of it, putting the paper on a money-making basis.

The London Spectator declares that Gladstone's father once said to him: "He is a most brilliant young man; but mark my words he is the most unstable man within the four seas."

Congressman Tom Reed of Maine thinks he has been in Congress long enough. He intends to go to New York and get rich. His nimble brain ought to get along anywhere.

The science of undertaking to tell character of a person by shape and size of the nose is called mazography. A journal devoted to the so-called science has been established in Paris.

Congressman W. L. Scott is not dependent alone on his pay from Uncle Sam. His horses are winning money for him. So far this year they have won over $25,000 for their owner.

Formerly some queer remedies were resorted to. Bees powdered were recommended in kidney cases, ants similarly treated in brain cases, and woodlice in dropsies and nervous disorders.

Parnell's popularity in Ireland is well attested by the many namesakes with which he is blessed. It is said that ninety out of every hundred male children born in Ireland are named Charles Stuart Parnell. He is the most popular man in Ireland since the days of Daniel O'Connell.

Don Cameron has an eye for money. He bought a piece of ground not far from Washington for $150 per acre. He called it Rossin Park, laid it off in lots, and now offers it for sale at prices which will realize him $1000 per acre. The Camerons have always had bright eyes for the almighty dollar. They always plant that they may reap more abundantly.

A poet must be allowed his fancy in house building as well as in word architecture. The cottage of E. C. Stedman, the poet, at Newcastle, on the coast of Newhampshire, is unique in its way, composite in architecture, built partly of wood and partly of stone from the neighboring beaches, with a stone tower on the side next the sea, savoring somewhat of an old Norman castle. The poet's study is in the upper portion of the tower, with an outlook every way.

ALLEGED WIT AND HUMOR.

"Charley" said a young wife, "is there really any such person as the fool-killer?" "Oh, I guess not; I don't know," said Charley, who was reading the morning paper. "Well, Charley, all I want to say is please don't go out after dark any more until you find out."—[Washington Critic.

A story is told about a statue of a frontiersman which is erected in Milwaukee, in the attitude of a woodsman, with a gun in his right hand. When a brother of the frontiersman was told of the statue, he said: "That's not like Brother Sol. He never had a gun. He was always afraid of a gun."

A German composer was conducting one of his overtures. As the "horns" played too loudly, he told them repeatedly to play more softly, and more softly they played each time. At the fourth repetition, with a knowing wink at each other, they put their instruments to their lips, but did not blow at all. The conducoor nodded approvingly, "Very good, indeed," said he, "now one shade softer and you'll have it."

A fortune-teller can hit a woman's case nine times out of ten. "You've had sickness and trouble. You'll have some property fall to you. You do not have full confidence in your husband. Beware! He is deceiving you. You have a very gentle nature. Everybody loves you. You have had trouble with a relative. It was not your fault. Beware of a blue-eyed woman with a mole on her left cheek. She will make you trouble. Good-by—$1—call again."—[Detroit Free Press.

COFFEE CONSUMPTION.

Styles in the Berry and Who Use the Most of It.
[Good Cheer.]

The Hollanders are the greatest coffee drinkers in the world, their annual consumption being about eighteen pounds per head of the whole population. Amsterdam has long been one of the coffee marts of the world, and, being admitted free of duty, coffee is very cheap. Next come Belgium and Denmark, in which the consumption per capita is about half of that of Holland. Next come the United States, in which the consumption per capita in 1880 was eight and eight-tenths pounds. The present consumption of coffee in the United States may be stated at a little over one pound per week for each family in the Nation. In the use of tea and coffee the people of England and the United States present a most remarkable contrast. The annual consumption of the people of England is just about a pound of coffee per head, or about one-eighth of that of the people of the United States. Comparing the consumption of tea with that of coffee, it will be found that while the people of the United States use about five pounds of coffee to one of tea, the people of England use five pounds of tea to one of coffee.

There are fashions in coffee, as in almost everything. At Aden and Alexandria the mocha coffee is carefully picked over and assorted, in compliance with the singular fashion in trade which creates a demand in Europe for the larger beans, while the United States will have none but the smaller ones. In point of fact, the larger beans are the best, being fully developed, more perfect in appearance and flavor.

PHIL SHERIDAN.

How the Lieutenant-General Lives and Enjoys His Home and Family.
[Washington Letter to the Record.]

Lieut.-Gen. Philip H. Sheridan is not a candidate for the Presidency. He laughs at the idea. He is no orator or statesman, but just a plain, blunt soldier, and no one knows his limitations better than he. He was and he is a great fighter and a good soldier, but something more is necessary in the President of the United States. A soldier must be a Grant or a Jackson to make a President of the United States. Personally "Little Phil" is as good as gold and as handsome as he looks. His heart is a good deal bigger than his body. He is a delightful companion at all times, whether in his home, on Rhode Island avenue, surrounded by his charming family; in his office in the War Department, at the Metropolitan Club or at a dinner party. He is a natural story-teller, his Irish wit and imitative powers giving every story a rare flavor. He lives very simply, but comfortably, in the house on Rhode Island avenue, bought with the fund presented to him by admirers after the war.

He is at his office early every morning, usually walking down in fair weather and back again at 5 o'clock. If raining he drives down in a plain carriage drawn by two black horses in plain harness. He likes dinners, theaters, races and cards, but his chief entertainment is found in the company of his little ones. They are handsome, healthy children, dressed in very picturesque costumes, which attract the attention of strangers who may not recognize the gray-haired old soldier with them as Little Phil. To take them to a matinee at the theater or circus, or for a stroll down one of the broad avenues, is pleasure enough for one day for the Lieutenant-General. Sheridan receives as Lieutenant-General of the Army a salary of $11,000 a year, an allowance of $1200 a year for quarters, and sundry other allowances which bring his income up to $13,000. He married for love and not for money—you can't imagine him in the son-in-law business. He is a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, occupying his pew in St. Matthew's, on H street, at high mass every Sunday morning, and listening with interest to the eloquence of Rev. Dr. Chappell. No one in Washington will miss the brilliant pastor of St. Matthew's should the latter be made Bishop of New Orleans, as rumor will have it, more than Gen. Sheridan.

Keep a Little Patriotism at Home.
[Texas Siftings.]

American wife: "Half the people in this neighborhood are sick. Did you see the councilman from this ward about that broken sewer?"

Husband: "I found Councilman Mulhooly after a long search, but he and Councilmen McHafferty and McDonegal were busy fixing up slates for the next convention and would not listen to me."

"You should have gone to the board of health."

"I did, but President O'Harlalhan was off getting a delegation solid for one McMoriarity, who is expected over in the next steamer, and I could not get any satisfaction."

"You wrote to the paper about it, didn't you?"

"Yes, but no attention has been paid to my letter."

"What are the editorials about mostly?"

"Home rule."

Some Folks Would Be Ashamed of It.
[Omaha World.]

New York Dame: Mrs. Kent is the sensation of the hour in New York now. She claims to be a daughter of Queen Victoria.

Omaha Girl: Queen Victoria!

"Yes, she says the nurse or somebody substituted another child for her and she wants her relation to the Queen recognized."

"But if she is Victoria's daughter that would make the Prince of Wales her brother, and connect her with some of those dukes and marquises the papers talk about."

"Yes."

"Hump! I should think she'd keep quiet about it."

Something Lacking.
[Boston Journal.]

The report of Land Commissioner Sparks abounds in statistics, but we do not see that it contains any tabular statement showing the number of times that the commissioner's rulings have been overruled by his superiors.

BEECHER'S SUCCESSOR.

The Temporary Pastor of Plymouth Church to be Dr. Lyman Abbott.

[New York Tribune.]

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, temporary pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, will take the pulpit the first Sunday in November, and continue in it until a successor, for Mr. Beecher is found. He has been living in the village of Cornwall, N. Y., and preaching in the little church there.

This eminent minister was born at Roxford, Mass., in 1835. He graduated from the University of New York in 1854, and studied law, and in 1858 began practice. From law he turned to theology, and, after being ordained a minister in 1860, accepted the Congregational Church in Terre Haute, Ind., as his first charge, in 1861. This he retained till 1866, when he resigned to go to New York as Secretary of the Freedman's Union. In 1869 he resigned the pastorate of the New England Church in New York, to become the editor of the Literary Record in Harper's Magazine at the same time conducting the Illustrated Christian Weekly. His published works include his "Life of Beecher," "Jesus of Nazareth; His Life and Teachings," "Old Testament Shadows and New Testament Truths," "A Dictionary of Bible Knowledge," "For Family Worship," "A Layman's Story," "In Aid of Faith," and "Illustrated Commentaries on the New Testament." He has also edited two volumes of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's sermons, and also, "Morning and Evening Exercises of Mr. Beecher." Dr. Abbott has written several pamphlets, the most notable of which is entitled, "The Results of Emancipation in the United States."

His friendship with Henry Ward Beecher began in 1854, while he was attending a law school in New York and sitting in Plymouth Church Sundays. When Mr. Beecher undertook the editorship of the Christian Union he asked Mr. Abbott to take the managing editorship. This offer was declined, as Mr. Abbott was then busy in pastoral work in New York, but he did become a contributor to the periodical, writing editorials and various other articles, until he assumed the editorial conduct of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, and wrote the "Record" in Harper's Magazine. He sat in the same Congregational Association with Mr. Beecher, and when the Plymouth Church Council was held, in which the New York and Brooklyn Association cleared Mr. Beecher of the charges made against him by Theodore Tilton, he went with the majority and refused to join the seceding Manhattan Association. After the Beecher trial was over Mr. Abbott was again invited to become associated with Mr. Beecher in the editorship of the Christian Union. As he was free from pastoral charge, he accepted the invitation and became associate editor. When Mr. Beecher resigned his editorship in 1881 Mr. Abbott took his place and has held it ever since.

The eminent minister who succeeds Mr. Beecher in the pastorate of Plymouth Church is tall and slight, but wiry and erect. His face is thoughtful and kindly, and exceedingly capable. He has deep-set, dark eyes and long, black beard.

In an interview with the representative of a Brooklyn newspaper Dr. Abbott said: "The congregation of Plymouth Church is very wise not to put a permanent pastor in now, for there will inevitably be a great falling off of the congregation and receipts, and that would discourage a permanent pastor and injure his prestige. It is better to let that happen while I am temporary pastor, and then let a young man come in while the church is on bedrock and build it up again."

DOGS AS SOLDIERS.

Canine Sentinels Which Germany Has Found Valuable.

It is now about three years since the Germans began to train dogs for outpost service in time of war, the first experiment being made at Lubben, in Prussia, and in Elsas. The dogs, says a Berlin letter, are all the same breed—a breed not thought very highly of among us. They are Pomeranians, or spitzes, mostly white in color, but occasionally gray, the gray ones being chosen when possible, owing to their not being so conspicuous. Our spitz dogs are always faithful as long as they are left at liberty, but once they are chained, little dependence is to be placed upon them; and the same peculiarity distinguished the breed in its native country. Each dog wears a light iron collar and pouch for letters, but he is never tied up or led by a string. His education is very carefully attended to. He is taught to smell out a Frenchman or Russian anywhere, and to know the difference between foreign uniforms and that of his own land. By certain sounds and gestures he is taught to give his master notice of his discoveries, and he has to run from post to post with letters in his pouch, besides looking up the wounded and straggling of the regiment to which he belongs. Every company has two or three dogs; so that the "regimental dogs" number a couple of score, at least; and these dogs always go out with the advance guard. A strange sight it is to see a German regiment on the march with the dogs behind the band, each looking as important as if he carried the proverbial field marshal's baton in his pouch. The dogs are always stationed with the outer ring of sentries. As soon as a stranger is noticed, off goes the dog to investigate. A long sniff gives him the characteristic odor, and back he comes to report. Should anything suspicious be noted, away goes the dog, skirting hedges and woods in search of an ambush. When the information is complete, the report is written on a slip and placed in the pouch, and the dog hurries off to the near officer in command.

School Dresses.

[Annie Jenness Miller in Dress.]

No doubt the faculty and trustees of any girl's school would do service to universal womankind by insisting upon a plain, sensible costume to be worn by all pupils during the school years. Many points can be urged in its favor; regard for physiological needs of developing girls, the freedom of the costume, the sisterhood, which would at once put all young ladies, rich and poor alike, on the footing of equality in dress during the years they are intimately associated beneath the same roof and in the same work, ending foolish and often-times bitter rivalry between those who can and those who cannot afford to dress richly; and, perhaps, no less important point than others, reserve the pleasure of beautiful costuming for the entrance upon social life, which is really the beginning of the necessity for individuality to dress.

While girls are in the school-room their minds should be occupied with its work and the simple, healthful pleasures incident to harmonious development of the bodily and mental powers which are to make the grand women later, and simple costume, varied in color to save monotony, would conduce greatly to the benefits of the school or college course. Make this regular dress pretty and attractive, light in weight, refined and graceful, always bearing in mind the freedom for development of good, sound limbs and muscles; but keep rich fabrics and fine jewels for the social debut.

Keep the girls young, and with something always in anticipation, for nothing is more disgusting and disheartening to thoughtful people than the base miss of 16, who knows everything and doesn't see much in life anyhow.

The Last of Earth.

Death—is it Death?
The shadow following still upon the sun,
The one same end of all things yet begun,
After the glory of Life the sudden gloom,
After the strife the inexorable doom.
The frozen breath?

Nay, rather see
Where the new grave lies sodden in the rain,
How the bare earth quickens to growth again!
Waiting the wonder season's lavish dower
Young rootlets creep, a wealth of grass and flower
Ere long to be.

When Death has passed
Into the land of silence and of cloud,
The leafless land, wherein no bird is loud,
Life lingers yet with song and blossom rife,
Lo! step for step go ever Death and Life—
But Life is last!

A Mild Hint.

[Nebraska State Journal.]

They had been sitting in contemplative silence for a long time, when William musingly said:

"I think, Naomi, that there is a great deal of wisdom in that old saying: 'Silence is golden.'"

"There may be, but gold is unhandy. I would rather have a Bill."

It took him an hour to "catch on," but he finally offered himself.

Sentimental Politics Passing Away.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

A contemporary says that the motto of many people is now, "Vote for Papa's Boy." Such a motto appeals to an amiable sentiment, but it is not practical politics. A great many people will not vote for papa's boy if they consider him incapable or undeserving.

LA PRESA!

The Beautiful Swiss Village on Lake Como

BEING REPRODUCED IN SAN DIEGO.

The most novel thing yet undertaken in the development of this southern country is now being done at LA PRESA, nine miles from San Diego. The plan is to reproduce in that delightful spot the counterpart of the celebrated Swiss village on Lake Como, in Northern Italy. To this end a railroad is being built to the place, and a fine modern hotel is to be erected at once. The situation is most delightful; far enough removed from the sea to escape rough winds, yet near enough to be always cool. With pure water, fine scenery, and the best of soil, LA PRESA is just the place to invest for a quick turn with big profits. LA PRESA is sure to grow rapidly, as it has all the elements to attract a select class of settlers.

SWALLOWED HER TEETH.

How a Physician's Skill and an Umbrella Rib Saved a Lady's Life.

[New York Herald.]

"Mrs. —— swallowed her plate. Won't you please come to the house right away?"

"She must have been pretty hungry," was the answer Dr. Charles Bliss gave the servant who made this announcement to him a few days ago.

"It's a plate with her teeth on it," was the reply.

The Doctor hurried to the address given, near Central Park, and found the family physician trying to dislodge the obstruction. The plate was in the shape of a horseshoe, with one tooth at each end and gold clasps beyond them for surrounding the two adjoining natural teeth.

The patient, who was a lady weighing over 300 pounds, was almost suffocated—scarcely able to gasp for breath. Dr. Bliss tried to pull the plate up, but the clasps had caught in the tissues, and he succeeded only in pulling off one of the teeth. In a few minutes the patient stopped breathing entirely. Something had to be done instantly or she would die. They were without surgical instruments.

Dr. Bliss pulled out a penknife and cut a slit in the lady's throat, through which he could feel the plate. She breathed once. This was encouraging. He dashed to the corner of the room, tore a rib from an umbrella standing there, wrapped his handkerchief around the end, and by main force pushed the plate down into the patient's stomach. Then he sewed up the gash in the patient's throat and left strict orders to keep her perfectly quiet all night, and forbade her food or drink of any kind, even water, before he arrived the next day. The patient's throat was, of course, inflamed, but the doctor's orders were obeyed, although her thirst was intense. Next morning early she bribed one of the servants to get her a quart of ice cream and ate every bit of it.

When the doctors called, soon after, Dr. Bliss merely remarked that he "hoped she would keep cool," ordered two ounces of castor oil and a bowl of oatmeal gruel, and left her chatting merrily with her relatives, who would have been preparing her for the grave had it not been for the common-sense and skill of Dr. Bliss.

BISMARCK FINED.

He Is Charged with Trespass and Helps to Convict Himself.

[St. Stephen's Review.]

During Prince Bismarck's stay at Marienbad the Chancellor was in the habit of taking long walks unattended, and one day, finding himself somewhat far from the town, took the shortest cut back. His way led him across some fields and the Prince marched vigorously forward, forgetful of the fact that he was tresspassing. Suddenly he was hailed in loud stentorian tones, and, on looking back, saw a stout countrywoman pursuing him. The indignant proprietress of the fields accused him to his face of his offense, and declared that she would follow him and give him in charge. She proved as good as her word, and tramped after the Chancellor until the high road was reached and a police officer came in view. The worthy woman formally made her complaint and the police officer was about to arrest the offender.

Struck by the resemblance of the trespasser to some high functionary, the police officer cautiously demanded his name. On hearing the name the policeman was simply paralyzed with fear, and the over-bold countrywoman, gathering up her skirts, fled precipitately. Naturally, the police officer was reluctant to take the charge, but Prince Bismark insisted upon going to the station. When there he charged himself with the offense of trespass, and paid the fine customary in such matters. In addition to this the Prince sent a present by way of consolation to the woman whose land he had invaded.

A Substitute for Gunpowder.

[London Daily News.]

It is rumored that Russia means to give up the pernicious habit of burning powder. Not that the Northern Bear is going to abjure its traditions and lead for the future a life of sweetness and light, but that a Russian engineer has found a cheaper and yet more efficient substitute for the villainous saltpeter of the past. It is said that this new explosive differs from gun cotton, and similar compounds, in that it does not strike downward. We do not know why such compounds are popularly credited with an especial preference for the downward path, unless it be the diabolical uses to which they are sometimes put. The truth is that their explosion is completed so quickly that the full force is exerted before there has been time for the gases produced by the ignition to lift up the atmosphere. The new explosive is said to be like gunpowder in that it only acts forward, by which we suppose that the explosion takes place at about the same rate, for we have an idea that guns are liable to recoil, or even to burst. Every now and then there come circumstantial accounts of some new method for preparing cheap hydrogen or cheap aluminum, either of which would go far to revolutionize the world; but cheap gunpowder, if the report be true, can only be welcomed for the impossibility of a reduction in the army and navy estimates.

Where They All Are.

[Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.]

Where, oh where, has the young man gone who graduation clothes put on, some time along the last of May, and owned the whole wide world for a day? And where is the girl graduate, who chanted an essay dread with fate, and started out with a giggling frown to turn this old world upside down? And where is last year's candidate, who had things fixed for this year's slate? Who carried around, as you'd believe, a couple of counties in his sleeve? And where is the scribe with a vaulting will, who tried a long-felt want, and courted shekels and renown with a minion paper in a bourgeois town? The lad has divided the world up fair, and owns but his own eight-billionth share; the sweet girl grad. is a grand surprise, and conquers the world with well-made pies; the candidate with his deathless "gall" is fixing himself for another fall; while the journalist with the haughty crest has gone the way of last year's nest. So year by year and day by day the world runs on in the same old way; the balloon that is biggest round about is the flabbiest rag when the gas is out.

Hysterical Religion.

[London Lancet.]

Of course nothing disrespectful to the idea of a truly religious sentiment must be inferred from our use of the phrase hysterical religion. What we mean to designate by that term is religious fanaticism essentially emotional in its nature and probably also in its origin. "Jumping," "shaking," and the like, are distinctly morbid disturbances, brought about by abandonment of the controlling will and judgment to the sensory impulses of the passions. Weak minds are supposed to be more prone than those which are normally robust to make this surrender of self-control, but, as a matter of fact it may be, and doubtless is, not unfrequently made by the strongest of intellectual organisms under the influence of such strong "feeling" as may readily be produced by overtaxing the higher cerebral centers. The wondrously complex mental apparatus is easily thrown out of working order, and it is not in the least surprising to find the more delicately organized and sensitive machinery of mind work so disabled. It follows upon this consideration that the subjects of "hysterical" disturbance in connection with religious thought and emotion are rather to be pitied than blamed for their vagaries. Nor are we prepared to say that, however much the existence of distinctly hysterical religions may be regretted, they ought to be put down by law. At the same time, it is clearly in the interests of public health and sanity that they should be adequately controlled, and we cannot help thinking that the young girls who hop in "glory holes" ought to be placed under some kind of supervision, if only that they may not be allowed to fall victims to the men "full of devils" who are not turned out of the places of "worship" where these decidedly undesirable orgies are held.

Stamped Casing.

The Los Angeles Planing Mills are turning out a novelty in the shape of stamped window and door casing. It is beaded, with stamped wire and flower running through the center. Very elegant for natural wood finish. Call at the mills and inspect the work; 423 San Pedro street.

On account of the increased travel east, the Santa Fé route has arranged for extra Pullman cars on their through Kansas City trains. They are also now running their emigrant tourist sleeping cars direct from Los Angeles to Kansas City direct.

D. 1887, at 2 o'clock p.m. of said day, at the office of said Board, at the town of Turlock, county of Stanislaus, State of California. Said bonds are issued under and in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "An act to provide for the organization and government of irrigation districts, and to provide for the acquisition of water and other property, and for the distribution of water thereby for irrigation purposes," approved March 7, 1887. Ten (10) of such bonds will be of the denomination of $100 each, and ninety-eight (98) of said bonds will be of the denomination of $500 each.

Proposals will be received for any number of said bonds.

Said bonds will be of the form prescribed in section 15 of said act, and bear six (6) per cent. interest; interest payable semi-annually.

None of said bonds will be sold for less than 90 per cent. of the face value thereof.

Said proposals will be opened at said time and place, and the purchase thereof will be awarded to the highest responsible bidder. Said Board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Any further information respecting said bonds may be had on application to R. M. Williams, Secretary of said Board, postoffice address Turlock; to E. B. Clark, President of said Board, postoffice address Modesto, or P. J. Hazen, attorney-at-law: Hatton & Fulkerth, attorneys-at-law, at Modesto, Stanislaus county, California.

Done by order of the Board of Directors of Turlock Irrigation District, October 10, 1887.

R. M. WILLIAMS, Secretary.
E. B. CLARK, President.

KENILWORTH

—SUBDIVISION OF—

THE OSTRICH FARM!

Los Felis Rancho.

One Hundred Acres Placed on Sale, Divided Into Building Lots 50x150 Feet,

AND A FEW FIVE-ACRE PLOTS.

—Such an opportunity is seldom offered. The soil is a rich alluvial deposit twenty feet depth. Drainage perfect, being gentle slope to the river.

All Under Los Angeles Irrigating Ditch.

Well water at any depth from four to thirty feet from surface. This tract lies in the FINEST SCENERY IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY, having the towns of Glendale and Verdugo and the Sierra Madre Mountains in front, and the lovely evergreen Los Feliz range of mountains rising 1300 feet from the tract at the rear, with the Los Angeles river running immediately between, making this a PERFECT AMPHITHEATER OF RURAL BEAUTY. The OSTRICH FARM RAILROAD is now running to the tract. Trains run into the city in twenty minutes and as often as necessary. Business men will find this the most convenient place for suburban residences, as the early trains will enable them to be at their places of business sooner than the horse cars from East Los Angeles or Washington Gardens.

The OSTRICH FARM will continue to be the attractive feature of this locality, and the ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS are now being added to and laid out in a style which will make this THE MOST ATTRACTIVE RESORT IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. This tract is three miles nearer Los Angeles than Burbank and two miles from Ivanhoe.

general. Again and again we have been charged to be content with our lot, we have been earnestly warned of the sin and danger of ambition—have been assured that it was the procuring cause of Satan's fall. In solemn language, as though it were a sin that would unloose the thunderbolts of heaven, we have been exhorted not to allow dissatisfaction with present conditions, or an intense desire for the unattained to creep into our minds. As many of you must know, this monstrous absurdity has been worn threadbare in the sacred name of religion. But, anywhere in this world, is there a place of rest? From infancy to old age is not life an incessant conflict—a letting go of the worn out and an eager grasping of the new? What becomes of the contented man? Inevitably he goes to the wall. The man without ambition, a desire to do, achieve, progress, who does not resist the all-surrounding tendencies to decay and avail himself of the all-surrounding opportunities for making new appropriations, establishing new relations, acquiring new territory, and so cultivating the intense forward gaze, is but a drone in this vast human hive, and the chances are that he will one day need honey, but have none. I do not like contented people. I do not believe that ambition is a sin. He is my man who is perfectly satisfied with nothing in this world, and who, with an unyielding purpose, undertakes to improve everything with which he has to do. Even for a Rothschild, who holds the purse-strings of a continent, and yet goes on with his business as though he were obliged to earn his bread. I have a hundredfold more respect for him who, with a sickening and enervating piety, regards a grand discontent, an irrepressible and insatiable ambition as a sin against God. There is a false ambition, an ambition for the unreal, and there is a true ambition, or an ambition for the necessary, the indispensable. There is a discontent that is mere fretfulness, peevishness, envy or jealousy, and there is a discontent so sublime, so divine, that it comes as an inspiration from God! And of all the moods of the mind, of all the the tempers of the soul, it is the most prophetic of good; and in all the severest conflicts of life it is a blessed evangel for which we may devoutly thank heaven. Look over the whole vast range of our material life and see what would be the result if we were content with things as they are? What if our fathers, our grandfathers had been content? What if the original white settlers of this land had been satisfied with things as they found them! As a Christian man, what are you earnestly hoping for your sons? That they will accept even with gratitude what you are able to do for them, and then fold their hands and therewith be satisfied, regarding the mere infatuation, the desire to use present means and opportunities as the nucleus of something a great deal better. . . . .

The doctor closed his remarks as follows:

Dear friends, lift up your eyes unto the hills, whose summits are aglow with a beauty and a light supernal. The common daily life is unspeakably enriched by a believing, longing, loving thought of God. Even the thought so high, and yet so restgiving, leaves its impress on the soul. But more than this, God, the ever-blessed and holy, comes into the weary, burdened, world-jaded heart. My brother or sister, do your hands droop? Has your lot been hard? Has it sometimes seemed as though you could no longer carry your burden? Have your steps actually faltered from the roughness of the way, with no light ahead, not a soul to offer an encouraging word? Has it seemed at times as though you must give up in dispair? God pity you time-blinded, half discouraged soul; but have you ever tried the upward, earnest, confiding look? I am tracing a type of experience to which the saints and sages of the world have borne glad and ample testimony. Though the way is rough, the burden heavy, the sky overcast, the discouragements numerous before you and all around you, as with unnumbered multitudes, your strength shall be renewed, your step become steady, your whole being vital with a new purpose, hope and joy if you will steadfastly, believingly, prayerfully look up unto the hills whence cometh all our help.

A New Church.

The newly erected Methodist Episcopal Church at Pasadena was dedicated yesterday afternoon. The new church is situated in South Pasadena, and is a model of neatness. The structure is of Gothic architecture, and its dimensions are 100 feet in length by 50 feet in width. One gallery in the rear of the church furnishes comfortable seating capacity for 500 people. The light and pleasant appearance of the edifice is all that could be wished for. The bright light is somewhat relieved by the addition of stained-glass windows. The church is as yet unprovided with pews, but the proposed plans in this respect will meet the approval of all. The assemblage yesterday more than comfortably filled the new church.

The cost of the church, roughly estimated, will be in the neighborhood of $5000, all of which amount has been contributed. There yet remained about $1500 to be paid into the treasury to provide for pews, carpets, etc.

A voluntary subscription started yesterday afternoon during the dedicatory services returned $500 to the fund, leaving but $1000 to be raised to entirely wipe out the debt of the church. With few exceptions, every prominent Methodist minister and layman in Southern California was present. The anthem, "Oh, How Lovely," which might very properly apply to the church as completed, was followed by a prayer by the Rev. J. A. Wood D.D. The close of the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," brought forward Rev. R. S. Cantine D.D., of the Fort-street M. E. Church, who delivered the sermon of the day, taking for his text "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

The sermon was full of deep thought and wisdom, and his listeners were much impressed with the joyousness and importance of the occasion as an advancement of the Methodist Church. Rev. P. F. Bresee, D.D., the pastor of the First M. E. Church of Pasadena, delivered an address of welcome, both to the Church of God and to the congregation who today become the fortunate possessors of this temple of worship.

The financial statement above summarized was then laid before the assembly by Prof. W. P. Hammond.

Very appropriately the congregation next sang the following dedicatory hymn:

O, God of love, to Thee we raise,
These hallowed walls with songs of praise;
Thy people wrought not for their fame,
But to exalt Thy holy name.

Receive our gift, O God of grace,
And with Thy glory fill the place;
Let power divine Thy word attend,
And streams of joy from heaven descend.

Thy spirit, Lord, in mercy give,
Bid dying souls look up and live;
Refresh all hearts who worship here,
Remove their guilt and banish fear.

Here may each weary soul find rest,
Upon the dear Redeemer's breast;
And light and strength through Him be given,
To guide us home to God and heaven.

The formal presentation of the church to the pastor, Dr. A. W. Bunker, was then made by the trustees, to which the pastor most touchingly and eloquently responded. Rev. G. F. Bovard, the presiding elder of the M. E. Pasadena District, then dedicated the church, and the congregation sang the anthem, "How Beautiful," benediction followed and the congregation was dismissed.

COUNTY HOSPITAL.

The Inmates Seem to Be Perfectly Happy.

Rumors have been floating around during the past few days that the County Hospital is badly managed. A TIMES reporter visited that institution yesterday afternoon, and was greeted in a cordial manner by Dr. Ballard, the surgeon in charge. The Doctor allowed the reporter every attention, and invited him to inspect the institution. The dispensing and commissary rooms were duly inspected. Everything was in a clean and orderly condition. The scribe was much struck with the class of clothing issued the inmates. Knit underwear of two weights was neatly piled upon the shelves. Good blue-flannel shirts and a good quality of overalls were exposed to view. Next, going through the long halls, the different wards were looked into. The beds and bedclothing were clean, and every attention seems to be shown to the inmates by the nurses. The kitchen was a scene of busy activity, the cook preparing the usual dinner, and his assistants preparing the different dishes. The bill of fare consisted of mutton, potatoes, eggs, beans, squash, and pudding for dessert. Under the new administration, Dr. Maynard has renovated the heads of the hospital. Mrs. Selling, the new matron, took her position a short time ago, and expressed herself that she would do her part to further the interests of the institution.

GEORGE LENOX ALEXANDER.

A Fly Real-Estate Man Painting 'Er Red.

George Lenox Alexander is a real-estate dealer in this city, but, owing to a mixture of beverages on Saturday night, he forgot his calling, and was boldly proclaiming that he was an officer of the law. At 2 o'clock yesterday morning he was found thus proclaiming himself, and was adding weight to the alleged of the position taken by flourishing a murderous-looking pistol in the air. "I am a detective from Tennessee, I am," said Alexander, "and, when I shoot, I don't know where I hit, for I shoot with my eyes shut; so keep close off, I am a bad man." Deputy Constable Johnston overheard the proclamation, and, fearing he might shoot some one, arrested him. He was obliged to spend the Sabbath behind the bars, notwithstanding he made most earnest efforts to have his friends release him.

Mrs. H. J. Young.

The funeral services of Mrs. H. Janette Young, wife of Rev. Wm. S. Young, was held at the Boyle Heights Presbyterian Church yesterday at 3 o'clock p.m. A large number of friends had already filled the church at that time, the Sunday school, mission societies and W. C. T. U. attending in a body. The services were opened and closed with appropriate anthems by the choir. Prayers were offered by Dr. Samuel H. Weller and Rev. W. J. Chichester, and consolatory remarks made by Rev. A. R. Bickenbach, a seminary classmate, and Rev. Wm. C. Stevens. The remains will be taken to Parkesburg, Chester county, Pa., for interment.

After Gamblers.

Detective Harry Johnston was meandering through the intricate and numerous alleys of Chinatown last night, and coming to the door of a tan game, stopped to take observations of the surroundings. One of the "lookouts" standing in front of the premises pulled the alarm cord which always hangs conveniently to the entrance, while the other put out his foot and tripped the officer up, bringing the latter to the ground. His object was, of course, to give his employers and the runners of the game a chance to escape. The Chinaman, who gave the name of Ah Chung, was arrested and lodged in the County Jail.

Hard "Mugs."

Prof. Miller, Cannon, Buffalo and Young Michell, will arrive today in San Francisco from Australia. These men are among the most noted wrestlers of the world. They open on exhibition at the Bay City on the 3d of November. Some of the Los Angeles athletic admirers are anxious that the quartette give this city a call. Theodore Bauer says that he is anxious and willing to meet Miller at any time. There are some young athletes here who might make a creditable showing in public should a chance be given them to show their powers.

Pullman Passengers.

The following Pullman passengers left for San Francisco yesterday by the 1:30 train: Frank Johnson, D. Callen, Mrs. J. W. Green, W. Goldstein, Mrs. Hopkins, R. H. Orton, Frank Phillips, R. T. Perkins, C. Jacoby, Mr. Taylor, J. R. Hillman, Dr. Eckinsberger, Miss Graves, Miss Ferris, T. Cablentz, O. T. Trinzel, Mr. Neill, S. Spencer, M. L. Mery, J. W. Alexander, N. Harcourt, and Miss Marbargh.

Left by the 7:30 train last evening: L. M. Miller, and Mrs. L. C. Lord.

The Boy Girl.

Mrs. Lehman, who was foolish enough to exhibit herself on the streets and at a variety theator on Saturday night last, dressed in male apparel, spent Sunday in the County Jail. Dan Smith's wife brought more suitable raiment for the prisoner yesterday, and, as she made the change, she remarked that she never wanted to see a pair of breeches again.

During the past few days a good many toughs have reached this city from the north, and yesterday afternoon they were busily engaged in taking in Main and Spring streets.

The prosecution in the Harlan murder case will be able to produce some very strong evidence tomorrow as they have succeeded in finding new and startling evidence during the past few days.

There are a number of houses of ill-fame in this city where liquor is sold without a license, and the authorities have made up their minds to root the evil out, and will begin their work this week.

The "Society News" column of yesterday's TIMES contained a paragraph relative to the presentation made by members of the First Baptist Church to their late pastor, in which there was a singular error. It was Mr. George F. McLellan who made the presentation address.

PERSONAL NEWS.

F. A. Tringley of San Diego is at the St. Elmo.

W. W. Gill, a well-known citizen of Oakland, is registered at the St. Elmo.

Alexander C. Thompson of Louisville, Ky., is requested to call at the TIMES editorial rooms this afternoon.

Miss Louise Perkins and a party will leave for Arrowhead Springs today, where they will spend several weeks.

Adjt.-Gen. Orton and wife left for San Francisco yesterday. Gen. Orton will assume his duties on November 1st.

H. H. Bancroft of San Francisco, the historian who is preparing a history of the State of California, is registered at the Nadeau.

L. R. Stockwell, George Osborne, Sam Meyers, Miss Brandon and Helen M. Mason of the Alcazar Theatre Company, San Francisco, are at the Nadeau House.

It is announced that MM. Falguiére and Antonin Mercié have received the order from the United States Government to execute the statue of Lafayette, which is to ornament one of the public squares in Washington. The pedestal is to be flanked by the leading French officers who took part in the War of Independence. The total cost of the monument will be f. 250,000.

ART NOTES.

A New York gentleman is trying to raise a fund of $200,000 to be used in the aid of art.

The new Burg Theatre in Vienna is to be decorated by Munkacsy, who is already at work upon the sketches.

Mrs. Henry Clews of New York paid Benjamin C. Porter $4000 for painting her portrait at Newport this summer.

A monument to Gambetta is to be erected in Place du Carrousel, in Paris. Two hundred and eighty thousand French citizens contributed to the fund.

It is said that Sir J. E. Millais' picture, "Portia," which was on exhibition in London during the past summer, has been purchased at the price of 2000 guineas for reproduction in colors, as the Christmas number of a London illustrated journal.

Munkacsy having been reported in straitened circumstances not long ago as the result of his own carelessness in money matters, his wife denies it in a private letter, in which she says: "What I always admired particularly in my husband was his ability to live within his means; even in the days of his trials he never spent more than his income."

A New York paper says that a well-known artist sent to a lady he had met several times one of his best pictures, handsomely framed, as a souvenir gift. The next day he received a note from the lady in which she thanked him for the picture, but begged to return the frame as she made it a rule never to accept anything valuable as a gift from a gentleman.

The Paris journal, Le Temps, describes a method by which clever French tricksters convert a water-color into what seems to be an oil painting, thereby increasing largely its value. The paper is rubbed down close to the color, then mounted on a panel, the whole washed with a chemical that strengthens and deepens the hues and the whole thickly varnished. Under a glass this production is calculated to deceive even the least confident connoisseurs.

The monument to the negro Cripus Attucks and his four white comrades, shot by British troops in Boston, March 5, 1770, is to be finished next July. The design, by Robert Kraus, has been chosen by the Governor and Council. A round truncated pillar bears the names of Samuel Gray, Crispus Attucks, Samuel Maverick, Jonas Caldwell and Patrick Carr. In front stands Liberty grasping a banner and holding up broken chains. The pedestal has a bas relief of the scene in front, and the simple date is given below. It will be twenty-four feet high and made of granite.

A Liar's Paradise.

[Pittsburgh Gazette.]

West Virginia is a small, sparsely-settled mountain State, near Pennsylvania, but it has the biggest syndicate of liars that ever imposed on distant newspapers. Never a day passes that a sensation of some kind is not sent out from it. If all the crimes that are related as happening within its bounds actually took place, one-half the population would be in jail, a quarter would be officers of the law and the other quarter would be fugitives from justice. If all the discoveries of mineral wealth are true it would be producing more gold than California, more silver than Nevada, more coal and iron than Pennsylvania, more diamonds than South America and more building stone than the whole New England States. If all the bears, panthers and wildcats and snakes do business there that are reported, it would be safer to travel through the jungles of Africa than through a West Virginia forest. If all the strange people live there that are said to, the museums of the world would not want for freaks for the next 100 years.

Young man: Thanks; about how much is it worth to you?

Editor: Oh, we don't pay for contributions.

Young man: Oh! (after a moment's thought). Well, I will see my landlord tonight, and the butcher and grocer, and, if I can make an arrangement with those gentlemen by which I can procure rent, meat and provisions without the unpleasant formality of paying for them, I think you and I can establish literary relations, sir, that will prove mutually agreeable. Which is the nearest way out?

Real estate is such a vital interest in Kansas that even in the midst of the festivities of a Presidential reception the average inhabitant wondered whether the President read the signboards and saw at what moderate prices corner lots could be bought.

Praise Your Wife.

[Columbus Telegram.]

Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her. She doesn't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have for the last ten years, but it will do her good for all that, and you, too. There are many women today thirsting for a word of praise and encouragement. You knew that if the floor is clean labor has been performed to make it so. You know that if you can take from your drawer a clean shirt whenever you want it, somebody's fingers have toiled. Why don't you come out with it hearty, "Why, how pleasant you make things look, wife," or, "I'm obliged to you for taking so much pains." If you gave one hundred and sixtieth part of the compliments you almost choked them with before they were married; if you would stop the badinage about whom you are going to have when No. 1 is dead (such things wives may laugh at, but they sink deep sometimes), fewer women would seek for other sources of happiness.

Valuable Invention.

An ingenious Frenchman has invented a system by which a train of cars can be brought to a stop very quickly. This is accomplished by the use of compressed air. The traveler has only to pull a rope to bring the train to a halt, and at the same time to detach a signal which indicates in which compartment car help is required.

An Opportunity Seldom Offered.

The Santa Fe Railroad Company are largely interested in the new town of Santa Fe Springs, at Fulton Wells. Consequently, all the projected improvements will be rapidly pushed until completed. This is the only resort within seventy miles of Los Angeles where first-class medicinal springs are found. It will, therefore, always be filled with health-seekers. The enterprising firm of Byram & Poindexter have secured 200 acres immediately adjoining the best side of this town of Santa Fe Springs, and will sell no town lots at all. They offer it only in blocks of from four to ten acres, at low acre prices, on easy terms. This gives buyers an opportunity to make handsome villa homes or small farms, just beside a railroad depot, handsome new hotel and other extensive improvements. Any purchaser of his property can double his money by subdividing into lots. Call on us for maps and further particulars. Byram & Poindexter, 27 West First street, Los Angeles.

A great many cases have been cured by it, after being given up as hopelessly incurable. It promptly relieves the pain in all cases. Sold by C. H. Hance, 77 and 79 North Spring street.

WAILING LIES.

AN ANGELENO KEPT THUS BUSY IN CHICAGO.

The Resplendence of Los Angeles Described to Be Chiefly "Texans, Mexicans, Spaniards and Italians"—A Mouse-Mouthed Liar.

The Chicago Tribune has recently, like many other Eastern papers, been publishing false and defamatory articles concerning Southern California. Ralph E. Hoyt, a well-known Angeleño now visiting his old home in Chicago, incinerates the latest liar in the following able fashion in the Chicago Tribune:

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—[Editor of the Tribune.] Several articles have recently appeared in the Tribune derogatory to Southern California. Knowing that you are proverbially fair in publishing facts on both sides of all subjects of public importance, I ask you for a little space in your columns in reply to a communication from Los Angeles in your paper of this date, signed "A Traveler." The writer does not say how long he had been in Los Angeles—whether three months, three days or fifteen minutes. But from the reckless character of most of his statements it would appear that his sojourn in that city was very brief, while his observations were as superficial as his conclusions are erroneous.

I have been a resident of Los Angeles nearly a year and a half and have taken great pains (by observation, inquiry and travel) to ascertain the facts concerning Southern California. I am not nor never was a real-estate agent, nor do I feel at all proud of the "corner-lot craze" in Southern California, of which "Traveler" so bitterly complains. I candidly admit that, in my opinion, the real-estate "boom" there has been pushed too fast, and that ere long there must be a check to the advances now being made on prices of real estate, particularly city and town lots. The sooner such a check comes the better for the permanent prosperity of that region. So much for the real-estate "boom!" But whatever may become of it, whether it shall last long or die early, the fact remains that Southern California possesses resources and natural advantages unsurpassed by any other portion of the United States. Nay, more, it is not even equaled anywhere outside of the Pacific Coast region. "Traveler's" letter contains several truths as well as numerous gross misrepresentations. He says: "It hasn't rained for six months." Of course it hasn't! Every school-boy who has ever read about California knows that nearly the entire State is practically without rain six or eight months in the year. We do not want rain during the months between early spring and late in autumn. We have no use for it. Farmers and fruit growers would consider rain at such times a calamity. We had our yearly supply of rain last February. The soil retains it, and cultivation brings the moisture to the surface.

But "Traveler" says: "The dust is six inches deep, and when the wind blows one cannot see half a block." Ah, yes! When the wind blows! Fortunately, as a rule, the wind doesn't blow sufficiently to stir up dust, which, by the by, your correspondent has made three inches deeper than the truth will warrant. During two whole summer seasons there I never saw a dozen windy days. There is, however, every day a cool, refreshing, but very gentle breeze from the Pacific Ocean, which everybody enjoys. This is one of the pleasant features of our incomparable climate.

Again hear the correspondent: "Trees that might be beautiful are an eyesore on account of the dust and sand." He forgets, or at least fails to state, that while the roads and trees are more or less dusty the crops are maturing all the same; that vegetable growth goes on continually, every hour, day and night, bringing forth immense quantities in wonderful perfection of such things as the people need to supply physical necessities. Perhaps the writer more keenly enjoys looking, for five or six months, at trees and the shrubbery laden with "beautiful snow" or brilliant with luscious icicles. If so, no Californian will envy him his enjoyment of the cheerful spectacle.

Again listen to the truthful "Traveler:" "Nothing grows except under irrigation—not one sprig of grass or any other vegetation." This statement is absolutely and unqualifiedly false. Much of the land requires irrigation, especially for fruit-raising. But there are hundreds of thousands of acres on which splendid crops of fruits, cereals and vegetables are produced without irrigation, some of them even yielding three, five and eight crops a year. This is on what we call "moist land," where moisture is always to be found two or three inches below the surface. Of course on the mesa land and in much of the "foothill region" more or less irrigation is required.

Once more the traveling growler says: "Without irrigation Los Angeles would be a desert." Yes, very likely. Without buildings Chicago would be a desolate, lonely spot. But there are buildings here and there is irrigation at Los Angeles. And the farmer or fruit-grower in Southern California whose land is provided with irrigation facilities (which are not very expensive) is independent to a degree unknown to the tiller of the soil in this country, where a season of floods and cyclones is liable to be followed by one of scorching drought. The California husbandman, with water at hand to moisten his land when needed, and exemption from rain when it is not necessary, is absolutely sure of good crops every year. And ten acres of good land there are worth more for practical, productive purposes than are forty acres of the best land in Illinois. This statement is susceptible of positive proof by figures.

Your correspondent's criticisms on our street-cars, room-renting, high prices, etc., contain some truth and considerable error. These things of which he complains are such as are always met with in a city that is growing as rapidly as are Los Angeles and many other places in Southern California. Improvements in such conditions are sure to come in due time. But your "Traveler's" mind wanders when he says "the inhabitants are chiefly Texans, Mexicans, Spaniards and Italians." It is true that various nationalities are represented there, but the most numerous class of residents are people from the Northwestern States and many from the Middle States, and a sprinkling of New Englanders. Many of the prominent business men formerly lived in Chicago.

Mr. "Traveler" recklessly says that "even the climate is a fraud," but he fails to state in what respect it is fraudulent. In the winter the climate of Southern California is perfectly delightful. It is hardly less pleasant during the other portions of the year. In the two summers I spent on the coast I suffered less discomfort from heat, dust and insects than I formerly experienced in Chicago during a single week. If there is a better climate on earth I do not know where it can be. There is room in that country for many more people, who, with some capital and a reasonable amount of industry, can enjoy more of the real comforts of life than they can anywhere east of the great mountains. California is a land of unequaled attractions, inexhaustible resources and almost unlimited possibilities. Its superiority over other sections of our land is at last beginning to be understood. The tide of emigration has set thitherward, and it will continue to roll on until that State shall number its population by millions, and include people from every portion of the civilized world. RALPH E. HOYT.

The Family Supplied.

[New York Sun.]

"You love my daughter?" said the old man.

"Love her?" he exclaimed, passionately. "Why, sir, I would die for her! For one soft glance from those sweet eyes I would hurl myself from yonder cliff and perish, a bleeding, bruised mass, upon the rocks 200 feet below!"

The old man shook his head.

"I'm something of a liar myself," he said, "and one is enough for a small family like mine."

Like Mamma.

[Detroit Free Press.]

An usher at one of our fashionable churches noticed a little tot of a girl waiting about the vestibule until the bell had stopped ringing and the services began. Then he kindly offered to find her a seat. "No, fank 'ou," she said sweetly; "I want to go in yere like my mamma."

Unless You Want to Buy, Don't Read This.

Being directly interested in the building of a standard gauge railroad from Los Angeles along the foothills to Santa Monica, places us in position to offer some gilt-edged bargains at various points along the route. We are sole agents for the sale of lots in Prospect Hill subdivision, in the Lick Tract, where grading has already begun and the building of a $75,000 hotel, "The Winchester," will be pushed to completion as rapidly as men and material can do it. This is the finest and most beautiful subdivision in the county, and only fifteen minutes' ride from Spring street. The cars will be running to this subdivision by October 20th, and a fine depot will be built immediately. Strangers and tourists are especially invited to call at our office and inspect the plans for the hotel; also maps of subdivisions. We have also several other tracts or subdivisions on the line of railroad and boulevard, which we will be pleased to show our customers at any time. Sunset boulevard, as well as the Foothills Railroad, runs through or near all these tracts, and we can accommodate you with large or small lots or acre tracts on which large profits may be realized. Being interested in the railroad, we can show you just where the depot buildings and sidings will be, so you will know just where to select lots either for business or residence purposes. Our carriage is always ready, and we will take pleasure in showing any one who desires to purchase, or to furnish any information in regard to the above properties. Strangers are particularly invited to make our office their headquarters while in the city, where any information in regard to real estate or railroad matters will be cheerfully given. We have some fine bargains in city property, houses and lots, in various parts of the city. Also a small hotel at The Palms, doing a fine business.

YOUNG BLUE JACKETS.

APPRENTICES—WHERE AND HOW THEY SERVE THEIR TIME.

Receiving-Ship at the Navy-Yard—How Apprentice Boys Are Received and Instructed—Inside of the Old Dale.

[Washington Evening Star.]

A ship with a tin roof lies alongside a wharf at the navy-yard. It is a ship with its spars cut down and a house built upon its deck. It does not represent, as a casual visitor to the navy-yard might suppose, some new idea in naval architecture. It is an old ship that will never go to sea again. Lest it should take a notion to start down the river toward the sea, the old vessel is securely fastened with cables and timbers to the shore. It is the United States ship Dale, the one that figured in the following advertisement that has appeared in the city papers:

"WANTED—Apprentices for the United States Navy, to serve until 21 years of age; boys between 14 and 18 received. Apply on board United States steamer Dale, Navy-yard, Washington. Pay, at first, $9 per month and board."

Thus, the good ship Dale, after weathering many a storm, in its old age—like some old mammy—is assigned to duty as a nurse for the new navy.

When a boy, attracted by the inducements held out in the advertisement, and inspired with an eager desire to seek for glory in a rakish blue sailor's suit, goes to the navy-yard, he finds the ship Dale, with its house and tin roof, a very comfortable vessel apparently to go to sea in, provided the sea is not rough. From ropes stretched on poles above the roof hang some clothes to dry, bearing mysterious legends like "Mess No. 8," or "Mess No. 5," that seem to give assurance that the board mentioned in the advertisement is a substantial reality.

THE ENTRANCE TO THE SHIP.

Leading from the land to the front door of the ship Dale is a wide gangplank with a railing on each side. At the foot of this gangway is a doormat, and a rope matting covers the planking. The front door is cut through the side of the ship. For the Dale is half house and half ship, a sort of amphibious structure, in which the neophyte taking his first degree as a sailor is introduced only about half-way into the mysteries of life on the deep. He still has about him much that he has been accustomed to ashore.

When a Star reporter crossed the gang-plank and stepped through the side of the ship upon the deck of the vessel his arrival did not excite any great commotion. The Jack Tars, who were splicing ropes or lolling about, did not seem at all astonished to see a landsman come through the side of a ship. On a bench was a bright-looking young colored man in a natty sailor's suit, who was talking with his sweetheart, a gaily-attired colored girl, who seemed very proud of her sailor lover, and they were not in a frame of mind to take note of a new arrival. Two officers were pacing rapidly, shoulder to shoulder, over a little stretch of deck, wheeling at the same point every time, and now and then exchanging a word. Of course, they did not notice the reporter. A naval officer aboard ship is not supposed to notice anything until he gives permission to a subordinate, who approaches for the purpose with the accustomed salute, to present it to his observation. So the reporter approached a desk that stood against the side of the ship near a parlor organ. There was a sailor man near the desk, and when the reporter accosted him the sailor inquired if the reporter wanted to enlist. As the reporter had not decided to enlist the sailor consented to attract the attention of one of the officers to his presence on the ship. As soon as the sailor advanced with his salute the spell was broken. The officers ceased their pacing, one of them disappearing in the cabin and the other joining the reporter, and showing much interest in the object of his visit to the ship.

WHERE THE APPRENTICES ARE SHIPPED.

On the upper deck, or upstairs, as a landsman would say, under the tin roof, the officer showed the reporter the office and desk where the apprentices are shipped. In an adjoining room the medical officers make a physical examination. "We make a thorough examination," he said, "and rigidly reject all who do not come up to the requirements. We have rejected two this morning. If there is any deficiency in weight, or height, or chest measurement, the applicant is not received." Boys are not taken, unless they express their entire willingness, and are brought to the ship by their parents or guardians, who must also consent to the boy's enlisting. When a boy is taken, sailor clothing and bedding are issued to him, and he is transformed at once, so far as outward appearances go, into a sailor lad. His landsman's dress has to be sent ashore, and, as he sends his bundle of clothes away, he metaphorically burns the bridges behind him.

HIS FIRST NIGHT

or two, even in a vessel that is half a house, will seem odd to him. He is given a hammock, and has to learn to swing it from the hooks in the beams overhead, on the berth-deck. At 6 o'clock in the morning he has to rise, put away his own hammock and bedding and respond to the call to quarters. After breakfast he may be detailed to help scrub the deck. Then in the morning he goes ashore, to attend the school taught in the yard. He attends the school, too, in the afternoon. Then he may be drilled with a rifle or in foot movements, given a lesson in splicing or tying knots, or taken out in a row boat to be trained at the oar. The boys are not kept here long, the officer said. When a squad of ten has been enlisted they are sent to the New Hampshire at Portsmouth, where their training is continued. The New Hampshire has spars, and there the boys are taught

TO GO ALOFT.

From the New Hampshire they are sent to one of the sea-going vessels, the Jamestown or the Saratoga, for a cruise, and begin their actual experience of sailor's life at sea. They will during their course of instruction attend the torpedo school at Newport for six months, and the school of instruction at the navy yard in this city for six months. Here they learn how to handle the big steel guns with which the new naval vessels are being armed. During all this time in their association with old salts they are picking up the sailor lingo, which is not now deemed absolutely essential to efficiency in a sailor, but adds much to the general picturesqueness of his life, as popularly viewed through the pages of sea novels.

Boys when enlisted hear are not given "liberty" or allowed to leave the navy yard unless they leave a deposit of $40 to cover the cost of the clothing and bedding issued them. The cost of these articles are charged against the boy and deducted from his pay, so, as [illegible] per month, the [illegible] the start. While serving on the training-ships the apprentices may, if deserving, be promoted to the rating of second and first-class apprentices, or seaman apprentice, second class, at the pay of $10, $11, or $12 per month, respectively. On cruising vessels they may get higher ratings, as a reward of proficiency, at the discretion of their commanding officers.

THE PHYSICAL REQUIREMENTS.

Before he is enlisted the applicant must satisfy the examining board of officers that he is of robust frame, intelligent, of perfectly sound and healthy constitution, free from any physical defects or malformation and not subject to fits, and that he is able to read and write. In special cases, where the boy shows a general intelligence and is otherwise qualified, he may be enlisted notwithstanding his reading and writing are imperfect.

The standards of height, weight, and chest measurement which applicants must reach are as follows: Boys from 14 to 15 years of age, height 4 feet 9 inches; weight, 70 pounds; chest measurement, 26 inches; 15 to 16 years, 4 feet 11 inches, 80 pounds, 27 inches; 16 to 17 years, 5 feet 1 inch, 90 pounds, 28 inches; 17 to 18 years, 5 feet 2 inches, 100 pounds, 29 inches.

When the boys have finished their course of instruction and ended their apprenticeship, if they are bright they are first-class sailors. It is expected that these schools will greatly improve the general character of the naval service. The naval apprentice becomes eligible to hold positions as warrant officers, and may as such receive pay ranging from $1200 to $1800 a year, besides the usual allowances. They are not obliged to continue in the service. Some go into the merchant marine, and, as the naval officer said to a Star reporter, rise to the command of merchant vessels.

TWO FRIENDS MEET.

"Hello! old fellow. What have you been doing to yourself? You look like a subject for the undertaker," exclaimed the man on the right.

"I have been taking mercury and potash mixtures until they have nearly ruined me," squeaked the old man on crutches.

"And I," said the other, "have been taking the genuine Swift's Specific, which has built me up from the first dose."

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC.

Nature's own remedy, made from roots gathered from the forests of Georgia. The method by which it is made was obtained by a half-breed from the Creek Indians, who inhabited a certain portion of Georgia, which was communicated to one of the early settlers, and thus the formula has been handed down to the present day. The demand has been increasing until a $100,000 laboratory is now necessary to supply the trade. A foreign demand has been created, and enlarged facilities will be necessary to meet it. This great

Colton and return	2.70

Take train leaving S. P. R. R. depot in Los Angeles at 8 a.m. Monday, October 31, reaching Seven Palms at 12:30 p.m. Leave Colton at 10:20 a.m. Returning on any regular train in two or three days.

Invest in PALM SPRINGS, where there is no frost, no fog, no heavy winds. The home of the banana, date and orange. Only spot in California where frost, fog and windstorms are absolutely unknown. The earliest season in the State. Best opportunity for men of moderate means. Every fruit and vegetable matures a month to six weeks earlier than anywhere else on the Coast. In a sheltered spot at the base of the San Jacinto Mountains lies Palm Valley, famous all over the southern part of the state as being the location of the Agua Caliente Springs, whose waters are an absolute specific for rheumatism and a host of other diseases. The soil of the valley is remarkably fertile, and it has been demonstrated that every fruit and vegetable will mature in this favored spot a month or more in advance of any other place. There is a

MAGNIFICENT WATER SUPPLY,

Derived from the Whitewater River and other sources, and a fine canal has just been completed, some eight miles in length and stone-lined, which conveys at all times an abundance of water. Ten acres of this land in fruit and early vegetables will furnish an ample income. These lands have been subdivided into town lots and 5, 10 and 20-acre tracts, and will be sold to the highest bidder, on easy terms,

AT AUCTION, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1887.

For any further information apply to CONDEE & STORY, San Bernardino; J. B. FISKE, Redlands; C. B. WEBBS & CO., Colton; HARVEY POTTER, Riverside; R. L. MUIR, San Diego, J. L. MOOTE, Ontario, or WATSON, STELL & CO., 244 N. Main street, Los Angeles.

The sale will be conducted by Mr. S. W. FERGUSSON, manager of

The Southern California Land and Immigration Company,

INCORPORATED,

Principal Office, 10 California Street, San Francisco.

NOTE—All the unsold portion of this property will be on sale by above-mentioned agents, and by S. W. FERGUSSON, 10 California st., San Francisco, and at 245 N. Main st., Los Angeles.

THE BEST CITRUS LAND IN THE STATE

Offered for sale in twenty-acre blocks, and can be bought in five, ten, fifteen or twenty-acre subdivisions.

Lytle Creek Water Piped on Each Lot.

Avenues 150 Feet in Width Traverse the Tract.

Water Furnished from a Covered Cement Ditch.

This land lies on the elevated plain directly west of San Bernardino city. The plain is a vast elevated table-land, with just enough of gentle undulation to break the monotony of the landscape.

Owing to the elevation, frost is practically unknown. Flowers in myriads bloom during the winter, the tenderest tomato sprigs are unscathed by frost, and the orange blossoms bloom in beauty throughout the winter. The view is one of the noblest and most picturesque in Nature. Each twenty-acre lot has a fine road at each end.

There are 29,000 acres in this tract, but 10,000 acres only are as yet surveyed. The town, RIALTO, is located near the center of this 10,000-acre tract and on the California Central.

The California Central and the Southern Pacific both traverse this great tract, and in all probability the Southern Pacific's parallel route will soon add a third railroad to this princely citrus tract. The western line of the tract is about two miles distant from the San Bernardino Courthouse.

The plain grows as fine oranges as the world has ever seen and the finest quality of citrus fruit generally, as buyers can see for themselves. There is no better raisin grape land in California. In fact all sub-tropical productions flourish to perfection.
